NIXON REFUND MORE THAN TAX

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — The Providence Journal-Bulletin said today that President Nixon paid $1,670 in federal taxes for 1970 and 1971 and received $131,503 in federal income tax refunds for the two-year period.

The Journal-Bulletin said government sources provided documents showing that President and Mrs. Nixon paid $792.81 in federal taxes in 1971, while receiving a $72,614.43 refund. It said the documents show that in 1971 the Nixons paid $878.03 in taxes and got a $58,998.41 refund.

The Baltimore Sun reported on Sept. 11 that Nixon apparently paid no income tax for the two years because of his deductions for interest, real estate taxes and the donation of his vice-presidential papers to the National Archives. These deductions, the Sun said, exceeded the President's salary of $200,000 a year.

Nixon issued personal finance statements in 1968, 1969 and 1972. He said at a news conference last month that his 1970 and 1971 tax returns were audited by the Internal Revenue Service and no change was ordered.

The Journal-Bulletin said today, "Taxes paid by the Nixons in 1970-71 are roughly equivalent to taxes paid by someone who earns about $7,000 a year, claims one exemption and does not itemize deductions, according to tax manuals."

Chimney remains upright after Esquimalt fire

FIRE GUTS FIRM

They found mainly ashes and charred timber — the remains of their 2½-month-old Beef Barn, one of two unoccupied buildings gutted by a fire which broke out just after 1 a.m.

A passing Esquimalt policeman noticed smoke coming from the restaurant and put in the call for fire trucks, Staff-Sgt. James Owens said today. By the time Esquimalt and Navy firefighting crews arrived, flames had engulfed the Beef Barn and an untenanted building next door at 941 Esquimalt.

Crews stayed on the job all night and by this morning were still wetting down the smouldering remains.

The cause of the fire has not been determined.

Lucas was talking about $1,200 worth of paper take-out bags printed with the restaurant's insignia. "We ordered them months ago and we've been waiting since May for these things to get here," Mrs. Lucas said.

"They were delivered Friday."

Three packages of cigarettes were found lying on the floor of the restaurant. They had been left on a desk the night before — the desk was destroyed but the cigarettes were merely singed.

"I guess I ought to keep this as a souvenir," Lucas said.

Unions Plan War Rally

Union leaders in British Columbia will meet in Victoria next Tuesday to map strategy in their battles against the government's proposed labor code.

The B.C. Federation of Labor, which with 200,000 members is the principal labor body in the province, has bitterly denounced the code, introduced into the legislature Monday.

B.C. Fed officers and representatives of affiliated unions will meet in the Empress at 10 a.m. Tuesday and it is expected that lobbying of MLAs will begin as soon as the meeting ends.

But in contrast to the B.C. Fed position, the leader of British Columbia's biggest trade union has adopted a wait-and-see position for the time being.

Jack Munro, regional president of the International Woodworkers of America, said in a telephone interview from Bermuda that his union won't attack the labor code at least until it has been thoroughly studied.

He said he wants time to study the code. He welcomed the appointment of former IWA regional president Jack Moore as a vice-chairman of the new Labor Relations Board saying "he has plenty of experience to do a good job."

He added that labor has for years sought a permanent Labor Relations Board, one of the features of the new legislation.

Munro's comments were seen as indicating a split between the federation and its biggest affiliated union, but B.C. Fed secretary Ray Haynes denied any suggestion of division.

Haynes said he is "sure" Munro has been "misinterpreted. He is in Bermuda where I am sure there aren't copies of the bill." Haynes said one newspaper which published Munro's comments today is "making a mountain out of a molehill."

He said the federation "can't wait for him to get back from Bermuda" and was moving immediately to lobby for changes in the labor code which had "shocked" federation leaders.

He said none of the persons the federation recommended for consideration among the appointments announced Tuesday to the Labor Relations Board was considered.

The cabinet appointed Paul Weiler, law professor and arbitrator from Toronto, as chairman and Moore, Vancouver Provincial Court Judge Nancy Morrison and Ed Peck, president of Towboat Industrial Relations Association in Vancouver, as vice-chairmen.

B.C. Gas Crunch Imminent

A shortage of natural gas in B.C. with the potential of causing losses of more than $20 million in production and more than 250,000 man-days could begin as soon as two weeks from now, Attorney-General Alex Macdonald told the legislature Tuesday.

Macdonald said he has obtained figures from major industrial operators in the province who will be seriously affected by the threatened shortage of natural gas caused by water in wells encountered by Amoco Canada Ltd., one of the major suppliers to Westcoast Transmission.

Westcoast has announced it will cut back supplies on a pro rata basis to all its customers, including the three major distributors who transport natural gas for use in B.C. homes and industries.

Macdonald said the "crunch" caused by the natural gas shortage could come as soon as Oct. 15, and be "getting severe" by Nov. 1.

Macdonald tabled in the house copies of his figures after saying he had expressed the government's concern over the situation to federal Energy Minister Donald Macdonald, who met the attorney-general earlier in the day.

Hardest-hit, according to Alex Macdonald's figures, will be Cominco's operations at Trail, with a potential production loss of $7.5 million and a loss of 150,000 man-days in employee time.

The second largest potential loss was put at $3.2 million in production losses and a loss of 45,000 man-days, by Consumers Glass of Burnaby.

A complete plant shutdown could result in the phasing-out of the operation, creating a financial loss to the community of more than $5 million.

Alex Macdonald said he had impressed on the federal minister the concern felt by the provincial government about the situation and had asked "in no uncertain terms" Otta-

Segretti Says Sorry

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Donald Segretti, his testimony interrupted by a bomb threat, told the Senate Watergate Committee today that ex-presidential aide Dwight Chapin hired him to conduct political sabotage on Democratic hopefuls last year.

Segretti testified that he received $45,000 in salary and expenses for his efforts, which he said he mounted in "about half a dozen" states.

He said Chapin, an old friend from college days, hired him late in 1971 to play "pranks" on Democratic hopefuls. Chapin often told him exactly what to do, he added.

Chairman Sam Ervin (Dem.—N.C.) abruptly adjourned the hearing shortly after 11 a.m. EDT until early afternoon "very much against my will" after being informed by police that there had been a telephoned bomb threat at the Senate caucus room where the hearings are being held. No bomb was found.

They were "wrong and have no place in the U.S. political system," Segretti said.

The California lawyer, testifying under a grant of limited immunity after pleading guilty Monday to three counts of minor political sabotage, accused the news media of distorting his activities "out of all proportion."

"I cannot help but feel that I have been abused by rumor, character assassination, innuendo and a complete disregard for the privacy of myself, my friends and my family," Segretti said.

Migrants Drawing Dole

TORONTO (CP) — A senior official of the immigration department said Tuesday that more than 3,000 migrant workers from such countries as Portugal and Italy are drawing unemployment insurance benefits from Canada.

He said the seasonal workers have been flying to Canada for years as "visitors" and working in seasonal construction jobs from May until October. In October, they register with Unemployment Insurance Commission offices and have their cheques sent to mail drops in Toronto, Montreal and Vancouver.

"Then they fly back home with their loot and enjoy it all winter and those unemployment cheques from Canada don't hurt a bit," he said.

He said they get employment here by obtaining social insurance cards which do not require proof of identity.

Some get as many as five social insurance cards under five different names and are paid under different part-time employment identities, he said. Another gimmick used by the workers is to claim the maximum number of dependents for income tax purposes "although many are single men".

B.C. HYDRO GIVEN STRIKE NOTICE

VANCOUVER (CP) — The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers has served strike notice against B.C. Hydro, but union representative Doug Cronk said today there are no immediate plans for the 2,400 employees to walk off their jobs.

There have been four meetings with the company since Gilmour was appointed Aug. 28, and another is expected Thursday, said Cronk.

Imperial Seeks Price Hike

OTTAWA (CP) — Despite a federal price freeze, eastern Canadians could soon face yet another increase in the cost of gasoline and heating oil.

The energy department disclosed Tuesday that Imperial Oil has applied for permission to bypass the freeze and raise its prices to offset a weekend increase in the cost of Venezuelan crude.

Details were not disclosed but a spokesman indicated the result could be a one or two-cent rise in the cost of gasoline if the government approves the application.

Similar applications are expected within the next few days by other eastern refiners, including Shell Canada Ltd. and Gulf Oil Canada Ltd.

Imperial has already made three price increases this year, the last Aug. 1 when gasoline went up two cents a gallon and heating oil rose 1.8 cents. The raises left prices in Montreal at about 56.9 cents for regular gasoline and 27.7 cents for heating oil.

A five-month price freeze for domestic petroleum products was recommended Sept. 4 by Prime Minister Trudeau as an anti-inflation measure.

It was subsequently accepted by all major oil companies but the government left the door open for intervening price adjustments to offset unforseen increases in the cost of imported oil.

The Canadian oil market east of the Ottawa Valley line is supplied totally by offshore oil under a national policy adopted in 1961. Markets west of the line are supplied by domestic oil, largely from Alberta.

Venezuela is Canada's largest single supplier of offshore oil. Remaining offshore requirements come largely from the Middle East.

Charges Against Agnew 'Serious'

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — President Nixon today said Vice-President Spiro Agnew's declaration that he would not resign even if indicted by a grand jury is proper and should be respected.

The president also told reporters in a half-hour news conference at the White House that he had never asked for Agnew's resignation.

He said that the vice-president had always insisted to him that he was innocent of any wrongdoing, but Nixon did say that the charges against Agnew are "serious," according to briefings given him by justice officials.

A federal grand jury met in Baltimore today for the second session to look into allegations against Agnew in connection with a reported political kickback scheme among Maryland politicians and contractors. Nixon said none of the charges involved activities since Agnew had been vice-president.

Meanwhile the judge handling the grand jury investigation told the jurors in an unusual public session that they should not be influenced by stories from the news media.

U.S. District Court Judge Walter E. Hoffman summoned the jury, after a private meeting with lawyers for Agnew and the justice department, to lecture them on their responsibilities and duties in investigating federal crimes.

Hoffman told the jurors that if they feel they may have been "improperly influenced by the news media" and cannot honestly consider the evidence that may be presented "you should advise me promptly to this effect."

Volunteer checks gas level in air over Camrose

A MILE-LONG DEATH CLOUD

Times News Services

NEW NORWAY, Alta. — A deadly mile-long cloud of hydrogen sulfide of 20 times lethal strength, wafted around this central Alberta farming area today forcing the evacuation of 5,000 people from six towns.

The RCMP said today it was considering the evacuation of a seventh community, Edberg, 12 miles east of the site where a natural gas well ruptured Tuesday, spewing deadly gas into the air.

Traces of the gas, which smells like rotten eggs, were detected in that community.

Many of the people who were evacuated during the night and from areas north and west of the well site were allowed to return home this morning but were warned to be ready to flee again should the deadly cloud return.

The cloud is moving at a rate of about 30 yards a minute in the area 50 miles south-southeast of Edmonton.

Crews wearing gas masks are working to cap the well and Sunoco officials believe the situation will be under control by tonight.

The 15-year-old well was being serviced to increase production when it blew wild.

Gordon Fredericks of Gamache Well Servicing Ltd., the contracting company doing the service work, said today a violent blast blew about 90 feet of pipe more than 20 feet into the air while pipe was being pulled from the bottom of the 5,600-foot well for replacement.

Officials said the well would be easier to control than a well which blows wild during drilling operations.

It contained a full casing and blowout equipment which could be activated after equipment was moved to the wellhead.

But if damage to wellhead valves and equipment was extensive, controlling the well could be a long process, one spokesman said.

The cloud of gas had people worried in Edmonton, 50 miles away.

Some were calling the Emergency Measures Organization headquarters there asking if they should prepare to evacuate.

The EMO said the people were assured there was no danger to the city, especially since the cloud of gas was moving eastwards, away from the provincial capital.

Inflation Outpacing Wages

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian workers are losing the battle of inflation after three months of extraordinary sharp rises in living costs that more than wiped out wage gains, latest government figures show.

Statistics Canada reported Tuesday that the average wage of four million workers — nearly half of Canada's work force, and concentrated in the highest-paying industries — declined two cents a week to $161.36 in July.

The decreased wages can be attributed to various reasons — the number of workers unemployed because of strikes during the month, shorter working hours because of holidays and the traditionally higher number of low-paid employees, such as students, during July.

The drop, coupled with the 3.2-per-cent jump in consumer prices in June, July and August, put the average worker's wages behind rising prices for the first time this year of Canada's worst inflation since 1951.

The July wage figure of $161.36 a week was $11.64 above July of 1972 but the 7.7-per-cent rise in living costs over the same period wiped out $12.42 a week in purchasing power for a net loss of 78 cents a week.

August's steepest monthly rise in living costs in 22 years is likely to make the workers' deficit even greater.

But if it shows wages remained unchanged from July, the average worker would show a net loss of $1.75 a week over the last year.

Conversely, if the August pay figure rises, it would make up some or all of the deficit.

TOP LABOR LEADERS TO PLOT STRATEGY

Still to be named are three management representatives and three labor representatives.

Haynes said the government is proposing to place the fate of working people in the hands of a board dominated by professional people and employer representatives.

The federation took exception to most major clauses in the code and said the "powers granted to the defunct mediation commission pale in comparison."

The power of the board to impose a first contract where collective bargaining has failed would be the same as compulsory arbitration and is wrong, the federation said.

Dealing with strikes and picketing, the federation said the code would restrict the rights of unions to pursue effectively the interests of members.

"The strikes will still occur, as they have in the past, legal or not, and at the same time the appointment of mediators will continue to be viewed with suspicion," the federation said.

Alf Petterson, chairman of the labor relations committee of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce, said his committee is meeting Friday to examine the bill.

But his own initial reaction is that "government is once again attempting to pass legislation establishing an agency whose decisions cannot be appealed, Petterson said.

The bill is also another attempt to "patch" labor-management relations rather than tackle the basic problem which is a generally held concept that labor and management are opposing forces.

For the sake of the economy and the public both groups must learn to work as a team, he said.

The new technology has produced workers with special skills and the traditional vertical hierarchy of management-labor relations must be changed, become more lateral.

It's time to talk in terms of profit-sharing, sharing of cost-savings and of workers buying into company stock, he said.

Because industries are now so inter-dependent, the rules and philosophy governing labor relations formulated at the turn of the century no longer apply.

Patterson said he doesn't know whether such a basic shift in outlook can be shaped by provincial governments. It may require direction from the federal government with co-operation from the provinces.

Part of the labor code, allowing unions (but not employers) to choose arbitration of contract renewal in fire, police and hospital employment, continued to gather favorable comment from affected unions, although they are not BCFL affiliates.

Fraser MacDonald, president of the B.C. Federation of Peace Officers which has 11 policemen's unions, said voluntary arbitration is welcomed.

"We are quite pleased with that, to have arbitration at our option and the municipality not to have any say in it," he said.

He added it is a "fair trade" for policemen to give up the right to strike for voluntary arbitration.

Ray McCready, secretary-business manager of the 11,000-member Hospital Employees Union, which is not affiliated with the B.C. Federation of Labor, said today the bill is far better legislation than the union has had to work with in the past.

Some of the bugs have to be worked out of the bill but when the act has been suitably modified it will be good legislation, he said.

A labor ombudsman can bring real benefits to trade unions, he said. In the hospital industry there is a problem with people being fired and then lengthy hearings being held before they are re-instated. An ombudsman could bring "immediate justice" by ordering them re-instated until their cases have been considered.

McCready said the provision enabling the labor minister to impose a first collective agreement when bargaining has failed is "very sensible" and a boon to unions engaged in secondary and service industries.

His union will be in a position to approach smaller employers when negotiating for a first contract knowing there will not necessarily have to be a strike to achieve a first contract.

The clause enabling an employee to opt out of union membership as a matter of religious conscience he described as a "totally unnecessary escape hatch" but he added he does not see it as a serious problem because not many people will be involved.

Those who do oppose unions on so-called religious grounds turn around and form their own union which then has membership discrimination on religious grounds. But he anticipates the new Labor Relations Board will scrutinize such cases carefully.

BUSINESSES BURNED

A plastic garbage pail stood beside what had been a kitchen counter. The pail, and the plastic bag inside it, were undamaged.

The only piece of equipment pulled out of the fire was a cash register, on loan to the Lucas'. All the kitchen equipment was built-in and could not be removed.

The couple, who lived nearby at 310 Roberts, heard the fire alarms and came to watch their restaurant burn.

The building was insured, Mrs. Lucas said. The restaurant opened July 15.

The Lucas', who own another restaurant on Quadra Street, will re-build the Beef Barn on the same site as soon as possible.

"We've still got a busines to run, this just makes it more difficult," Mrs. Lucas said.

The other destroyed building, only a foot away from the restaurant, had been sold recently to a medical supply firm, but was not occupied yet, Owens said.

The two-storey frame structure was something of a landmark for Esquimalt. For years it housed a small meat market, later a combination sports and taxidermist shop and then Richard's Tin Shop marked by the tall tin man who kept vigil outside the store.

The fronts of both shops are still standing, but the rest of the walls, ceilings and floors were destroyed.

wa move to make Westcoast cut back its supplies to foreign customers only, not to domestic users of the resource.

Donald Macdonald, interviewed after the meeting made no commitment on behalf of Ottawa, saying he is awaiting a report from the National Energy Board on the situation.

Alex Macdonald said he is hoping for "supplemental" federal action on a natural gas program he said will hopefully be unveiled in the near future.

The B.C. Energy Commission, in a major report released 10 days ago, said the government should "provincialize" its natural gas supplies and set up a crown agency to handle production, distribution, marketing and processing of the province's natural gas. Macdonald said the government will act at this session of the legislature to set up the agency.

Specific problems outlined by Cominco officials included a warnng that low volumes of gas would cause "a definite hazard to many parts of fertilizer and metal production plants."

Loss of wages to the work force was estimated at $5 million and loss of revenue to the government at $8.75 million. Cominco also said the cutback in fertilizer production would seriously affect the Canadian agriculture industry.

Prince George Pulp estimated its potential losses at $2.3 million and 20,000 man-days. If daily volumes fall below the minimum level of 700 thousand cubic feet (MCF) per day, a freeze-up could occur, causing a six-week shutdown and $1 million in damages.

Northwood Pulp of Prince George estimated losses of $1.6 million and 5,500 man-days. If volume falls below 1,000 MCF per day, a shutdown could result from a plant freeze-up.

Other industrial concerns named by Macdonald (with their financial and manpower losses bracketed): Weyerhaeuser's plant at Kamloops ($1.25 million, 150 man-days); B.C. Forest Products at Mackenzie (no financial estimate, 18,620 man-days); Finlay Forest Industries at Mackenzie ($1.57 million, 11,053 man-days); Lafarge of Kamloops ($1 million, 3,600 man-days); Hiram Walker, Winfield (several million dollars, 3,600 man-days); Cariboo Pulp at Quesnel (no estimates).

Lafarge reported cement shortages caused by disruption of operations at its Kamloops plant could affect critical construction projects throughout the entire interior of the province.

Hiram Walker reported that if its standby oil supply could not be maintained "extreme damage" could occur to its $40 million plant and stored products.

They do not include wages of the other half of Canada's work force in agriculture, fishing and trapping, education, health and welfare services; religious organizations or government employment.

In a breakdown by provinces, Statistics Canada reported these average wage figures for July, based on initial reports:

Newfoundland $152.74 per week, up $2.26 from June and $20.44 above a year earlier; Prince Edward Island $115.81, up $1.73 for the month and up $15.46 over the year; Nova Scotia $133.85, up four cents in July and $9.57 above a year earlier; New Brunswick $132.94, up $1.39 for the month and $8.93 for the year; Quebec $153.33, up four cents in July and $10.08 over the year; Ontario $166.40, down $1.06 from June and up $11.14 over the year; Manitoba $148.71, an increase of $1.99 in July and $10.15 above a year earlier; Saskatchewan $144.18, up $1.96 in July and up $9.60 for the year; Alberta $165.06, up $1.86 for the month and up $12.78 for the year; British Columbia $182.12, up 65 cents in July and $17.94 above a year earlier.

Regional Gov't Topic of Talks

Several municipal leaders in the Greater Victoria area have been asked to meet Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer next Tuesday, but Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen says amalgamation isn't necessarily the topic for discussion.

Pollen told city council's caucus session Tuesday the invitation letter from Lorimer merely indicates the minister would like to discuss with municipal representatives the board structure of local government on southern Vancouver Island.

Pollen said he expects the talks to include possible ways of making regional government "more meaningful and productive."

Earlier Tuesday afternoon, at a meeting of Greater Victoria intermunicipal committee, Pollen expressed the opinion the four core municipalities should try to establish uniform bylaws covering such matters as standards for conversion of apartments to condominiums, regulation of sign advertising and curbs on noise nuisance.

Pollen said it was "crazy" that individual municipalities were now trying to establish their own standards for condominium conversions. Rationalization of certain key bylaws in the area would be of great assistance to builders, the police in their job of enforcement and the community generally.

But Oak Bay Mayor and committee chairman Frances Elford reacted coolly to the suggestion, saying it had a ring of "creeping amalgamation."

Elford said Oak Bay's own standards in some of the fields mentioned by Pollen are extremely high, and the municipality would strongly resist any move which might result in lowering those standards.

"I think this would involve relinquishing some of our autonomy," she said, adding that Oak Bay would welcome any attempt by neighboring administrations to upgrade their own standards to Oak Bay level.

Remarking that Elford appeared "over-simplistic" in her attitude, Pollen said: "I don't think we should sit here and pose for holy pictures. You (Oak Bay) could high-standard yourself out of existence."

Meals are loaded for delivery by Mr. and Mrs. Norris Higgins

They Bring Home Bacon For Those Who Can't

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

Close to 200 elderly people scattered around Greater Victoria have a special kind of lifeline.

It's called Meals on Wheels, a voluntary agency, associated with the Community Chest, providing regular hot meals — meat and potatoes, roll and butter, and dessert — for the past five years to people who might not otherwise get them.

The agency is hoping to get about $1,000 this year from the United Appeal to pay for upkeep of its office, new equipment, and repairs on its delivery truck.

The meals are prepared by handicapped workers in the kitchens of Goodwill Enterprises, 220 Bay, and delivered to homes around the city by volunteers just before noon.

The pensioners who get the meals receive more than good nutrition, says Joan Plumpton, fulltime Meals on Wheels co-ordinator.

"It's the fact that there is someone visiting them, even if they stay for only a short time," she said.

Most get the meals five days a week, some three days a week.

For many the short visit of the Meals on Wheels hostess is the only visitor they'll have that day, someone to get washed and dressed for.

"It gives them the incentive to go on," said Mrs. Plumpton.

She said many people who must move and leave their elderly parent living alone will order Meals on Wheels for them, just to make sure someone's looking in on them regularly and making sure they're all right.

A hostess who finds someone on her delivery route who is ill or in need of help will notify the right agency.

Each meal costs the recipient 75 cents, but costs Goodwill more than $1 to prepare, said Mrs. Plumpton. A few customers on welfare have their meals paid for.

There is no means test for getting the meals, but recipients must for age or health reasons have difficulty preparing their own meals.

They range from the dowager duchess living alone in a big house in Oak Bay, trying to get on by herself, to elderly men and women living in cheap hotel rooms downtown.

The man whose wife never let him in the kitchen finds himself totally unable to cope now that she's dead, and turns to Meals on Wheels.

Many who find it too hard to get to the store and cook a meal will stop trying and start living on tea and toast.

Meals on Wheels gives them good solid food that can almost last them the whole day, said Mrs. Plumpton.

The 130 volunteers work as hostesses taking the food into each home, as drivers, as people who visit customers periodically to sell them meal tickets.

Most volunteers are retired, said Mrs. Plumpton, and people from the Prairies are particularly faithful because they're never daunted by cold weather.

Since March the salary of Mrs. Plumpton and her part-time assistant have been paid by the provincial government.

Power Plea Put to B.C.

A plea will be issued to residents of British Columbia to cut back on electricity to assist Washington and Oregon if the power shortage gets worse, a U.S. power official said in Victoria today.

"We may be forced to issue a good-neighbor plea to share your power," said Henry Curtis, general manager of the Northwest Public Power Association.

Curtis said American companies were reluctant to approach British Columbia for additional power because of the international implications and all other sources were being investigated first.

"But if we have a dry winter it will be a disaster and there is no question but we will have to ask British Columbia for additional help."

At present British Columbia sells only surplus power to Washington State.

Meanwhile, said Curtis, Oregon has ordered a total blackout of all outdoor lighting, except for street lights and illumination needed for safety reasons.

Washington residents and industries have been asked to cut back on electric use by 7 per cent — the amount of the shortage anticipated this winter.

A good neighbor plea to conserve electricity has gone out to Idaho and Montana and they have indicated they will cut back where possible.

"If we get a normal rainfall, this may see us through the winter," Curtis said.

However, there was a 20 per cent chance that it will be a dry winter and Columbia power generation will be even lower than anticipated, Curtis said.

"It will be a disastrous situation."

He said so far there has been no formal approach to British Columbia for additional power, except what is available as surplus to the needs of Canadians.

Curtis said Americans were most reluctant to get involved in nationalistic disputes about energy sources and would only approach B.C. for additional help when all other avenues had failed.

However, the present outlook was very grim, particularly in view of the expected cutback on natural gas by Westcoast Transmission.

The cutback is the end result of a water incursion into wells owned by Amoco Canada Ltd. which sells natural gas to Westcoast Transmission. Westcoast exports to El Paso Natural Gas, which was to sell natural gas to the Portland power firm.

Excess Only for Export

Public opinion in British Columbia would not support construction of power plants to supply Americans with electricity, British Columbia Hydro chairman David Cass-Beggs said in Victoria today.

He said B.C. will be able to export only surplus power when and as it becomes available.

British Columbians had a right to be assured that they will have power available over the long term even though there appears to be plenty available for the next 10 to 20 years at least, he said in a speech to the Northwest Public Power Association convention at The Empress.

In fact, British Columbia has only avoided a power shortage such as is being experienced in Washington and Oregon because it has a two-river policy.

Cass-Beggs said that while the Columbia River was producing less power than usual, the shortage was being made up by transmissions from the Peace River.

British Columbia would sell as much surplus power as was available to the United States but it could not afford to commit its energy resources for a long period of time through a guaranteed contract.

Junta to Clarify Chilean Seizure

SANTIAGO (Reuter) Chile's ruling military junta plans to launch a worldwide campaign to explain why it seized power.

In Washington, meanwhile, the U.S. Senate voted Tuesday to bar economic and military aid to Chile until President Nixon determines whether the new government is treating political prisoners and refugees humanely. It adopted an amendment by Senator Edward Kennedy (Dem. Mass.), who told of reports on the plight of refugees in Chile following the recent military coup.

A spokesman for the four-man military junta that overthrew the late President Salvador Allende last month said a campaign has been launched abroad to distort the image of the junta and its reasons for staging the coup.

Meanwhile, the number of violent deaths in the Chilean capital over the three weeks since the military coup appears to have been approximately 750, on the basis of checking Tuesday at the central morgue.

This contrasts with the latest official count of 251 for the whole country.

Bill Dallin talks about mining.

"As a travelling salesman, I find that the mining industry has done a lot to open up the country to the public, and consequently aid rural development," says Bill Dallin, Foundry Salesman. Mining gives a great economic boost to a community in wages and money spent locally, both for development of new mines and maintenance of operating units. After the forest industry, mining operations represent one of the largest dollar values in the province."

Powers and People

Far-reaching labor legislation introduced Monday by the NDP government is ostensibly designed to reduce labor-management conflicts in the province, help to avoid work stoppages, and provide machinery to act quickly to settle disputes and smooth the way to agreements. Ironically, it may evoke bitter opposition on some counts from both management and labor. The measure is so complex and extensive, however, that both parties in labor relations will be able to find acceptable aspects along with the objectionable.

Apart from a few salient items, the general tenor of the legislation appears to be favorable to labor. There are a number of new protections and rights written into the law which labor should welcome. The sole departure from the union shop principle involves non-membership in unions on the grounds of religious objection. There are relatively few persons in the province to whom this will apply, and in any case they must contribute union dues.

On the other hand, picketing rights are extended, rules regarding certification of unions are broadened, and in many cases the option of action—for instance, to call in an arbitrator—lies with the union. Certification of a union can be ordered by provincial authorities where there has been undue delay by management. An augmented atmosphere of strict government control marks the whole bill.

That feeling is increased by the provision for a new 10-man Labor Relations Board which will have wide and largely unappealable powers of decision and command. An unusually large array of officials and official bodies is to be available under this central authority. There will be "special officers" appointed by the minister to settle disputes arising from collective agreements and holding extensive powers. There will be commissioners and commissions of various kinds to investigate and report.

But the most promising appointment along these lines will be that of a labor ombudsman, who can investigate the decisions and recommendations of other boards and commissions. Apart from the Labor Relations Board itself, this appointment may prove to be one of the most important in the field of labor relations. The ombudsman will deal directly with the minister and the Legislative Assembly, and have full powers for publication of material involved in his work. Naming of this individual will be of great public interest.

There undoubtedly will be lengthy debates on the legislation, and vigorous representations from interested parties. The prospect is, therefore, that a number of amendments may be made before the bill is passed. But there is a definite trend toward tighter government control in this legislation, and this general principle is not likely to be relinquished by the NDP cabinet. The law courts have been virtually removed from the labor picture so far as appeals and other resorts are concerned. This is an infringement of hard-won civil rights.

Much of this venture into trying to ensure more stable labor relations will not be adequately judged until it has been in operation for some time. If it achieves production unhampered by strikes and slowdowns it may be judged a success. But that success will have a price to be paid by management, labor and the general public. And that, too, must be assessed in rating Labor Minister King's effort.

". . . oh, come on, Harold . . . they just want us to drop over for a couple of minutes to see some of the other souvenirs they brought back . . ."

The Energy Minister's Pipe Dream

Federal Energy Minister Donald Macdonald has reiterated the government's offer that Canada would supply all of Washington state's petroleum needs by pipeline, providing the U.S. government dispensed with bringing Alaskan oil through the Strait of Juan de Fuca by tanker. If only the solution were that simple.

Mr. Macdonald's offer makes good political fodder, but he must be aware that the Nixon administration has committed itself to shipping North Slope oil down the west coast by ship to Cherry point refineries. And while environmentalists and most people who live on Vancouver Island would applaud the minister's initiative, at the same time they realize it is a pipe dream.

In essence the energy minister is saying you can have a clean strait if Canada promises the Americans unlimited oil. His offer included supplying existing refineries "plus those that arise from natural growth."

If Cherry point is going to be the terminus for much of the Alaskan oil, "natural growth" promises to be phenomenal, given the U.S. appetite for petroleum. Cherry Point would be the distributing point for oil that eventually might service most of the U.S. west coast and mid-west.

If the Canadian government agreed to make a permanent exception for oil exports to Washington state, it could be the thin edge of a continental energy policy whereby Canada was drained of its energy blood. The recently released national energy report stated bluntly that this country could not afford to be a major exporter of petroleum products. Canada needs a specific energy policy which ensures adequate fuel needs for future Canadian generations.

Even one major oil spill on the B.C. coast could prove to be a terrible catastrophe. But if the alternative is a sort of ransom in the form of all the Canadian oil that Cherry Point might demand now and in the future, it might be a little too stiff to pay.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Political Prisoners

In July of this year 19 Canadian MPs and Senators pledged themselves to act as representatives of the concern of Canadian citizens about the political prisoners of South Vietnam. We write this letter to appeal to you to become aware of and concern yourselves with the plight of hundreds of thousands of political prisoners being tortured and executed in the prisons of South Vietnam. Despite the decrees of the Peace Treaty and the denials of the American government, Senator Edward Kennedy has revealed that more than $15 million has been secretly allocated to maintain this police and prison system.

Why should Canadians of the religious communities concern themselves with this issue? If the religious communities are to stand for the conscience of the people, the plight of the Vietnamese political prisoners cannot escape their attention. Canada has signed the Human Rights charter of the United Nations which rules out such treatment of prisoners, as well as the Peace Treaty which specifically decreed the release of all political prisoners. Canada is legally committed to protest in this matter. Many thousands of Canadians have already allied themselves with the International Committee to Free Vietnamese Political Prisoners in order to publicize this atrocity.

In an interview in March, 1973, with George Morrison, Secretary to the General Council, United Church of Canada, the Hon. Mitchell Sharp, Minister of External Affairs, said that the Canadian government would act on this matter, "if it heard an expression of concern from Canadians."

We appeal to you, a people of humanitarian concerns, to write letters to MPs expressing your support for their efforts. We also ask you to direct your letters to the Hon. Mitchell Sharp of the Department of External Affairs, Ottawa. — Msgr. Guy Belanger, Roman Catholic Bishop of Valleyfield, Que.; Rev. Dr. Norman Berner, President, Canadian Council of Churches; Rev. Bruce N. McLeod, Moderator, United Church of Canada; Dr. W. Gunther Plaut, Rabbi, Holy Blossom Temple, Toronto; Bishop W. E. Power, Bishop of Antigonish, President, Canadian Catholic conference; The Most Rev. E. W. Scott, Primate, Anglican Church of Canada.

Commissioners

I understand that the Canadian Pension Commission with the Department of Veterans Affairs have 23 commissioners who preside over the adjudicate claims of war disability veterans. Out of this number there are only four qualified in the legal profession. The remainder are laymen as far as law is concerned. Even though these laymen are veterans of war and peacetime service they do not possess the legal qualifications to solve the many problems regarding war disability veterans.

Commissioners of the Canadian Pension Commission are paid extremely high salaries ranging from $19,400 to $31,000 per annum and many are appointed to a term of ten years. Perhaps the elected members of Parliament who make the rules will investigate and remedy this situation. It would indeed be advantageous to war disability veterans and their dependents to have all the commissioners of the Canadian Pension Commission qualified in law. — Vic Napier, PO Box 951, Vancouver, B.C.

Different Approach

Reference a front page article of the second section of your issue dated September 26 entitled "And yet another Study?".

May I please be permitted to comment on this article. I would not wish an erroneous impression to be left on the minds of your readers.

The proposal made to the Greater Victoria Public Library Board at the request of Mr. Don Miller, the Director of the library services, did it is true, mention the word "study". However, the context of this word was intended to mean "to examine closely".

The assignment, which our proposal covered was for the purpose of designing, and implementing a full integrated staff performance and appraisal system which would prove to be compatible with the needs of the personnel employed within the system and enable the administrative element of the library to be better informed as to the performance of those employed within the system.

Let me make it quite clear, that the evaluation of those employed by the library board, such as the previous Woods, Gordon survey was apparently called upon to do, is not part of our terms of reference. Evaluation of personnel would undoubtedly take place after the implementation of the performance appraisal system, but this would purely be at the discretion of the existing director of library services.

I would appreciate your publishing this letter in order to alleviate the possibility of your headline leaving an unsavory impression in the minds of the public, particularly in view of past experience within the library system.—Frank R. Machin, President, F. R. Machin and Associates, Ltd.

C. L. SULZBERGER

Cold Draft on U.S. Defence

United States reliance upon a volunteer military establishment does not seem to be working well and if an improvement in the rate of enlistments doesn't materialize, the nation will either be forced to reduce overseas commitments more than its policy-makers desire or find a new defence budgeting approach.

Last month recruiting for the four U.S. armed services fell 11 per cent short, with 19 per cent of the lag in the army. The more glamorous but smaller navy and air force achieved their goals, but the total of military recruits was under strength for the seventh consecutive time.

Draft Unpopular

This was not a great surprise to qualified foreign observers but American officialdom, recognizing how unpopular the draft had become politically, has tended to gild its predictions. The Pentagon calculated in February that U.S. forces then were at a level of 2,350,000 and would drop only to 2,250,000 by the year's end.

Nevertheless, U.S. allies have not shared this confidence. A year ago Denis Healey, former British Defence Minister, wrote: "President Nixon's commitment to end the draft must require a substantial reduction in United States forces."

Experts of Western European union concluded: "The termination of compulsory military service will lead to a reduction in the over-all level of American forces and very probably there will be noticeable changes in the level of American forces stationed in Europe."

London's International Institute for Strategic Studies estimates that by mid-1975, when the last conscript is released, there would be "doubts about her (America's) ability to maintain more than about 1.8 million men under arms: a prospect which demands qualitative excellence, something which the Soviet Union will, for its own reasons, clearly wish to match."

Yet 1,800,000 is nowhere near what Washington has so far counted on. The President's Commission on an All Volunteer Force reckoned in 1970 on 2.5 million. The Brookings Institution thinks the present doctrine of "strategic sufficiency" could be maintained with 2.2 million volunteers.

However, that would require that one out of three qualified and available Americans volunteer for active service before the age of 23. The national mood doesn't seem to warrant that likelihood. Approximately 25 per cent from each military academy class resign at the end of the obligated tour of duty: And British experience with a volunteer force during the 1960-70 decade showed a continual shortfall in recruits although the services were steadily reduced.

Although financial, housing and other inducements have been offered, it is being discovered that money won't buy recruits, at least in normal peacetime economic conditions. A new search is therefore inspired to save budetary expenses in weapons systems.

One member of the House Armed Services Committee believes "we can't afford the technology we're capable of developing," and certainly there is still a great deal of fat and duplication in our military establishment.

Nevertheless, many observers are aware of the danger in weakening American arms and manpower now deployed in Europe to keep the peace and, incidentally, the political status quo. Moscow's opposing force is estimated by NATO at 100 Soviet combat divisions in Eastern Europe and Western U.S.S.R., backed up by 60 other Warsaw Pact divisions (excluding 30 divisions in Russia's strategic reserve).

Soviet technology is catching up rapidly with American advances, a process that Andrei Sakharov, inventor of Russia's H-bomb, predicts will be accelerated by new scientific and commercial accords. Within two or three years Moscow will be deploying SS-18 missiles with multiple (MIRV) warheads, double in number and each five times stronger than the largest MIRV U.S. missile, Minuteman 3.

Diplomatic Poker

We are therefore facing an era when, should the present detente turn sour, we would no longer be strong enough to play a cool hand of diplomatic poker. One precaution might be restoration of some kind of national service, only partly assigned to military roles but also, as in France, available for economic, technical and teaching aid abroad, if the recruit so prefers.

Apart from the paramount requirement that a democracy must be able to defend itself and to reckon on doing so permanently, there is also (as the French recognize) a philosophical aspect. Should not each youngster feel a duty to serve his state one year?

I discussed this four years ago with Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, then chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. He said succinctly: "The draft gives a cross section of young American society. You would lose this with a professional (volunteer enlistment) army."

The New York Times News Service

Roosting With the Chickens

A bouquet of ragweed to columnist Jack Scott for tackling a topic on which he is apparently ill-informed at best; I refer to his column in the Times of September 26, entitled "The Canadian Cop-Out — Concorde's New Look." Mr. Scott has taken Canada's international air carriers, CP Air and Air Canada, to task for being "chickens in a world of eagles" over their failure to purchase the supersonic Concorde airliner; he informs us that our carriers "have forfeited the golden chance to get in on the ground floor" of supersonic commercial air service.

Mr. Scott's reasoning unfortunately seems to rest on little more than an appeal to our petty sense of nationalistic pride. For the Concorde, while undoubtedly a technological gem of speed and graceful looks, is a dud from almost any other aspect one cares to examine.

For a start, the plane's operating costs have been shown to be sky-high in relation to its passenger capacity. The DC-8 jets, which Air Canada and CP Air presently operate, are similar in passenger capacity to Concorde and these fly half-empty much of the time, producing only a marginal profit in the process. Concorde, with its much higher operating costs, will require more passengers per flight and higher ticket prices in order to fly profitably. Cheaper, not increased, fares are what generate additional air passengers.

Mr. Scott has for some reason failed to mention the noise problem. Lack of research on his part, perhaps? For the Concorde is a noisy bird (I refer to noise generated outside the airplane rather than to conditions in the plushy aircraft cabin). Noise has become a number-one problem in commercial aviation under the present generation of subsonic jets and has led to millions of dollars in lawsuits brought against airport operators in the U.S. by irate citizens living near those airports. It has also blocked development of badly needed new airport facilities in such cities as New York, Chicago, and London; this has been due to the loud protestations of residents against the impending racket of aircraft approaching and departing at low altitude. And Concorde, as presently constituted, is noisier than anything the airlines have flying today; so noisy, in fact, that it is questionable whether the aircraft will be capable of meeting the noise certification standards of the U.S. Federal Aviation Administration. This noise has nothing to do with the sonic "boom" Concorde will produce in full supersonic flight.

Ah yes — sonic boom; Mr. Scott forgot to mention it in his column. Any aircraft flying above the speed of sound (around 750 miles per hour) generates in its wake a continuous shock wave that reaches the ground in the form of a loud, vibrating "boom." Recent supersonic flights conducted during an extended period over England to test people's reactions produced complaints of everything ranging from broken glass to shattered nerves to loss of sleep to cows that stopped giving milk and chickens that stopped laying eggs. As a result, Concorde will not likely be permitted to overfly populated land anywhere at supersonic speed, rendering it just a conventional airplane for any flights other than those over the open sea or barren wilderness. Thus the transcontinental routes of CP Air and Air Canada, such as Montreal-Toronto-Vancouver, could not be flown supersonically; let me note again that Concorde's only attribute is its ability to fly at supersonic speed!

Lastly, we come to the matter of non-stop flying range — that is, the distance an aircraft can fly under normal conditions without having to refuel. A supersonic transport's only advantage is realized over long routes which it can cover at great speed. Yet Concorde's range is poor. In fact, with a full fuel load, Concorde will make it from London or Paris to Montreal or New York with very little fuel to spare. So forget Air Canada's non-stop service between Amsterdam and Edmonton. We'll have to carry on with the good old DC-8 or Boeing 747 on such routes because Concorde just won't make it.

The column mentions that by 1975, Air France and BOAC will inaugurate Concorde service. I assume the reason he hasn't mentioned any other carriers is because there have been rather few of them that have ordered the aircraft in quantity. Is it but a coincidence that the only two airlines to purchase Concordes in sizeable numbers have been the government-owned airlines of the two countries that have developed and built the plane at tremendous expense?

In conclusion, I would answer Mr. Scott's contention that Air Canada and CP Air have forfeited a "golden chance to get in on the ground floor" with my own contention that they have forfeited only increased airport noise and airline deficits. He tells us that our airlines "truly are chickens in a world of eagles." Let me remind him that the eagle as a bird species is in danger of extinction; the chickens on the other hand are doing well, thank you. — Michael Bambiger, Milnes Landing, Sooke, B.C.

From the Times of October 3, 1913

All roads lead to Saanichton this morning, and on every highway and byway, at all hours, flat carts, rigs, wagonettes and automobiles might be seen faring north laden with produce, fruit and flowers for the 46th annual fall exhibition of the North and South Saanich Agricultural Association. Inclement in the early hours, the weather improved greatly towards midday, and by a little after noon, bright sunshine gave an excellent omen for the success of the exhibition. In the agricultural hall itself, very early, there was a scene of great activity. Carpenters and joiners were putting the finishing touches on the stands and balconies, while decorative features of bunting and streamers were being hung about the hall.

Other nations wouldn't accept Canada's rate of unemployment

Why Can't We Cut Jobless?

By EDWARD CARRIGAN

In that chilling way with which it declares its acquiescence in disaster, the Liberal government, in the person of Manpower Minister Robert Andras, has urged Canadians to reconcile themselves to permanent unemployment.

It can think of no plausible alternative to extensive, chronic joblessness, and it clearly does not entertain the possibility of anyone else devising a cure.

The Canadian government is almost certainly the only one among those of industrial nations which has announced its resignation to mass unemployment and, perversely, it probably would take pride in this distinction.

West Germany somehow has managed to reduce unemployment to less than one per cent, and has kept it from statistically disappearing only by importing almost three million unskilled workers from the south of Europe.

Over-populated Japan, 108 million people on 143,000 square miles, has duplicated the West German experience with ease, and reports that jobs are being created at the rate of one million a year faster than its labor force can fill them.

Switzerland, in September, 1971, announced that unemployment has risen from 34 in August the year before to 51, and government officials were uneasy at this rise. Speculation was rife that if joblessness rose to 100 the government might feel compelled to declare an emergency.

Unemployment has many costs which are not clear at first glance.

This year the Canadian government is likely to spend almost $3 billion to relieve the symptoms of unemployment through unemployment insurance payments, welfare payments to the able-bodied, adult retraining, and assorted make-work schemes such as Local Initiative Projects and Opportunities for Youth.

If unemployment were reduced to two per cent — still twice as high as West Germany and Japan consider necessary — these costs could be reduced by $2 billion or so, and the money devoted to such things as health care, housing or family allowances.

Persistent unemployment induces thousands of young people to remain in school longer than they would if reasonable possibilities for gainful employment were open to them. Since this nation's public education bill hovers around the $9 billion figure, and it devotes a higher percentage of its national output to public education than any other Western nation, this is a cost that is likely to be formidable.

Many thousands of Canadians are never able to enter the labor force, or are obliged to drop out of it because of the limited number of job openings. These potential workers represent "concealed unemployment" — joblessness which does not show up in statistics since the people in question have never had work, or have been without it for so long that they have given up trying to find it.

In Canada the number of women belonging to the recognized labor force is only half as great as the number of men, the lowest ratio in the Western world.

In both the Soviet Union and West Germany the number of men and women in the recognized labor force roughly balances, and this balance exists in the most intensely industrialized regions of the U.K. and France.

Increasingly, women engaged in caring for their children, or in the other duties of keeping house, are being seen as members of the labor force in good standing. But the fact remains that there are countless women in Canada who would take jobs outside the home if they could find them. These women seldom show up in unemployment statistics.

Canada is notorious for the difficulty it inflicts on men between 50 and 65 seeking work. Often when men over 50 lose a lifetime job, the best they can look forward to is enforced, impoverished unemployment until they become eligible for the old age security pension.

Canada also suffers from what is known as "disguised unemployment" — workers kept in unproductive and unremunerative jobs because little opportunity exists for them to better themselves. A total of 80,000 people are employed on Canada's fishing fleet, although the value of the landed catch as recently as 1970 was only $190 million. Many other Canadians subsist as best they can on the income from traplines and part-time jobs in wood-cutting for the pulp and paper industry.

Under more robust economic conditions thousands of these workers would be decamping for better paying industrial jobs, but these jobs are too scarce to spark this movement.

Extensive joblessness also induces governments to prolong the life of industries and plants which, in the normal course of economic events, would better be left to die a natural death.

In Japan and West Germany the announcement of the closing of a redundant plant would attract a phalanx of industrial recruiters, who either wish to move the workers to plants short of labor, or wish to convert the plant to more profitable output in order to use the local pool of labor.

In nations embarrassed by unemployment the pressures are strong to subsidize the continued operation of the plant in order to prevent a worsening of the unemployment crisis.

The federal government must come to see that unemployment is not the product of the immutable order of things, but a reflection of its own mismanagement of the economy.

It results from extensive foreign ownership of secondary industry, which causes an abnormal importation of parts, machinery, services and raw materials which should be made locally.

It results from foreign-owned secondary industry possessing only limited authority to export, and fragmenting industries into too many small, uneconomical enterprises.

It results from a national industrial strategy emphasizing the export of raw materials in place of the development of secondary industry, in a misguided attachment to the 19th-century principle of the international division of labor.

Unemployment is the product of governmental timidity which refuses to utilize the instruments of fiscal and monetary expansion to the full in pursuit of full employment and rising incomes.

Following his conversion to the cause of deflation and continued unemployment in late 1969, Prime Minister Trudeau explained unemployment variously as proof of the superiority of the capitalist system over the Communist system (implying that those unhappy with unemployment were secret Marxists), as the antidote to even higher unemployment and as evidence of a more gracious way of life.

The election results of last Oct. 30 indicate that his efforts at persuasion were lost on the majority of Canadians.

Unemployment is a social waste which requires not sophisticated explanations, but solutions which almost every other Western government seems to have found.

Away We Go To Dreamland

By ANDREW H. MALCOLM

Twelve hours a day and more the shiny silver turnstiles turn over and over and over, each click representing another customer, another vacationing American who has paid $5 or $6 to enter the summer fantasy world of yet another theme amusement park.

Once, such fantasy was left to Disneyland, which opened in 1955. But now, what seemed to be a Disney patent is running out. Other giant concerns, with visions of more than sugar plums dancing in their corporate heads, are bankrolling a growing number of theme amusement parks.

Already about 20 such parks, drawing customers from 500 miles away, annually attract about 25 per cent of the nation's estimated 200 million amusement park patrons.

And soon, thanks to interstate highways and the descendants of Tomorrowland, Fantasyland, Frontierland and Adventureland, it may be possible to drive across the U.S. without setting foot in Realityland.

"There sure is a boom," said an official of the international association of amusement parks and attractions.

"The new parks are a lot better than the junky asphalt amusement parks I went to as a kid," said Wayne Temple as he, his wife and two children rested their feet in the middle of 10 hours of programmed pleasure here at Six Flags Over Texas.

This 12-year-old park, a 145-acre area on Interstate 20, halfway between Dallas and Fort Worth, is, as some immortal public relations man would put it, the original copier of Disneyland.

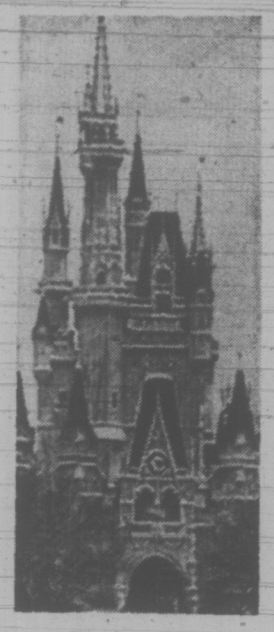
It is a representative of the new generation of such parks. It is carefully planned. It is staffed by clean-cut, well-dressed college students who say "Hi" and volunteer to take families' pictures.

There are some 95 separate rides and attractions, none of them of the step-right-up-you-won't-believe-your-eyes variety. There is a five-storey slide, a nostalgic musical revue, a puppet show, a petting moon and a dolphin show.

Take away the rides and substitute trained seals, penguins, dolphins, a killer whale named Shamu and a water-skiing elephant that all commute by jet from the West Coast, and you have Sea World, a four-year-old, 70-acre park southeast of Cleveland near Interstate 80.

"It's a nice change," said one woman. "You don't often see a a whale in Ohio."

Take away all the rides, buildings and attractions and you have a 650-acre plot on Interstate 94 in Gurnee, Ill., in northwest suburban Chicago, which within a few months will become the construction site of a $40-million park owned by the Marriott Corp. And so it goes from Williamsburg, Va., to Anaheim, Calif.



The boom is on

Even the patron's comments heard among the screams of roller coaster rides are similar.

"I don't like the waiting in line," said Christy Garnett in Kansas City.

TOGETHER WITHOUT MARRIAGE

A Mark of Uncertainty

By WILLIAM SAFIRE

Eight times as many couples are living together today without being married as cohabited 10 years ago.

That judgment — it's really my guess — is based on a new study being made by Dr. Paul C. Glick, the U.S. Census Bureau population division's senior demographer.

In 1970, 143,000 unmarried persons told the census-takers they were living with a partner of the opposite sex, compared to 17,000 in 1960; obviously, there are millions more who do not volunteer this information to strangers, but a trend toward cohabitation outside of wedlock is discernible.

What's the reason for it? When the subject of singlehood is explored, it usually centres on the swinging blessings of the bachelor existence, but let us narrow the question to those couples who are not single but who are not about to get married.

Lauren Hutton, who wears the mantle of "nation's most celebrated model," which over the years has graced the perfect shoulders of Jinx Falkenburg, Jeanne Paget and Suzy Parker, told a Time magazine interviewer that she has been living with a male friend for eight years and considered marriage "great for taxes, necessary for children, abominable for romance."

I have no cheekbones to pick with, womannikins lib, but I think the matter of a change in the mating procedures of the human race deserves a little discussion before being hailed, winked at or tut-tutted.

Many couples who will neither marry nor kick the cohabit say that their in-between status perfectly suits their needs. They usually do not want children (and the birthrate has been declining, partly because of the acceptance of contraception) and they often want independent careers (the biggest increase in the labor force in the past decade has been women).

Moreover, parental pressure on daughters to marry early seems to have abated: The number of women in their 20s who remain single has risen by over a third since 1960. Time was, girls would dread the moment when the nagging question, "How come you're not married yet?" would subtly change to a mildly curious, "Why is it you never married?" Local cultures differ, but that moment seems to come later today if it comes at all.

Proponents of living together singly say, with Miss Hutton, that it is good for romance: That is, the lack of a legal document enhances a relationship, keeps both partners on ther toes, staying together because they prefer to, rather than because parting woud be too complicated and expensive. People who settle down soon settle up. Thus, to them, the absence of legal ties helps strengthen emotional bonds.

Unmarried cohabitors never say they maintain their status because it's daring and chic and "in," and they are under pressure to conform to the nonconformist lifestyle, or because they want to flaunt their sophistication by flouting morality. But sometimes that enters into it.

Conservatives find it hard to react to this cohabitation trend; they are torn between traditionalism, which sternly condemns any assault on the sacredness of permanence of the family unit, and libertarianism, which holds that people not hurting anybody by their actions should have the personal freedom to do what they want.

People who want to live together outside of matrimony (the word's root is "motherhood," which says a lot about the purpose of marriage) should neither be stigmatized nor applauded. If no children are involved, that's the couple's business; if they are young, it can be their tragedy, if they are old, their happiness. (If they are very poor, they have been doing this for years, but this is not today's subject.)

There is this weakness in the cohabitation argument: If a "piece of paper" should not be needed to hold people together, why must that marriage certificate be permitted to become a licence for mature people to drift apart?

The unmarried state of people living together is less a mark of independence than a mark of uncertainty; less an expression of strength of mutual respect than a confession of the weakness of people to commit themselves to each other; and less a challenge to society than a refusal to rise to the greatest individual challenge of all — to symbolically make permanent a union with another independent person.

Price Hike on Borrowing Cash Twice What It Has Been on Beef

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

While consumers have had to deal with food price increases of 13 per cent in the past year, businessmen have been hit with a 50 per cent hike in the cost of borrowing money.

The prime bank lending rate today is 9 per cent, up from 6 per cent a year ago.

While price increases in other commodities are expressed in terms of percentages, the huge increases in borrowing costs are hidden because they are expressed in percentage points.

An increase in the bank rate to 9 per cent from 6 per cent sounds like a 3 per cent increase. In fact it is a 50 per cent increase.

The problem is compounded because some announcements refer to the increase as being "up 3 per cent to 9 per cent."

The 50 per cent increase in borrowing costs is among the top of the list of items hit by inflation in the past year.

That well-publicized villain, beef prices, has gone up 26 per cent in the past 12 months to remain at bargain level compared with the cost of borrowing money.

The central Bank of Canada interest rate has risen from 4.75 per cent to 7.25 per cent in the past year, or an increased cost of 52.4 per cent.

The prime rate to large businesses and industries is up 50 per cent from 6 to 9 per cent.

In the United States, prime bank loans are up 81.8 per cent at 10 per cent (from 5.50 a year ago) and the U.S. Federal discount rate to the banks is up 67 per cent at 7.5 per cent (from 4.5 per cent).

While the large commercial and industrial borrowers (and the banks) were faced with greatly increased costs this year, small lenders have fared better in percentage terms.

The mortgage rate has increased only 11 per cent at 10 per cent (up from 9 a year ago) and consumer loan costs are up only 4.2 per cent at 12.5 per cent.

However, the sharply increased cost of borrowing for large businesses has given the whole economy a sharp inflationary boost.

The cost of borrowing money is a primary factor because businesses must and can pass the additional charge along to customers.

Conversely, U.S. analysts are coming to the conclusion that while inflation continues there will be no significant drop in interest rates.

According to the new developing theory, investors will continue to demand high interest rates because of the rapidly deteriorating value of the dollar. Between 3 and 4 per cent of the current bond rate of 8 per cent (about half) is seen as a cushion against inflation.

This inflation factor in interest rates is expected to grow, preventing any significant decline in the rates.

In addition, demand for loans remains high because technological expansion projects are very expensive and seldom can be financed out of retained earnings of companies.

This impetus accounts for the continuing heavy demand for loans despite the high interest rates, according to the U.S. analysts.

This also indicates that interest rates could well remain at a high plateau for the long term, they add.

How They've Risen

Most costs have risen sharply in the past year but few items have risen as much—in percentage terms—as the cost of borrowing money. Big borrowers have borne the brunt of these increases.

Increases in the past year:
Prime loans — 50 per cent.
Cost of living — 8.3 per cent.
Beef prices — 26 per cent.
Cafe meals — 16 per cent.
Groceries — 16.2 per cent.

Church Urges Shares as Levers

TORONTO (CP) — There should be more to investing than simply making a buck says the United Church of Canada.

It says share ownership in a company should be seen as a means by which moral influence can be exerted on corporate policy over and above sheer profit.

"Christians and their churches ought to put their money where their mouth is," the United Church suggests in a 24-page booklet on investment policy entitled All That Money Can Buy.

In Canada, the United Church and its congregations have more than $100 million in investments, most of it in bonds. There are also investments in company shares.

Share owners are part-owners, says the booklet. "As such we have a legal right as well as a moral responsibility to express our opinions to our company and try to influence its policies."

Businesses should be pressed and encouraged to move toward goals in which Christians believe. These may include equal opportunity, freedom from exploitation and control of pollution.

The policy statement estimates that all Christians in Canada, based on church membership figures and statistics Canada reports of personal savings, have a total of more than $2.5 billion in bank savings accounts.

It urges church members to practise what they preach.

The United Church, for example preaches against apartheid and has urged the Canadian government to discourage investment in Namibia, a part of Africa occupied by South Africa in defiance of United Nations and World Court rulings.

Yet among the United Church's investment holdings is Falconbridge Nickel Mines Ltd., a Canadian company which operates in Namibia.

"Canadian Christians," says the booklet, "who are Falconbridge's neighbors and share owners and customers have been largely silent."

Loving Care, Friends Bring Back Her Youth

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

There's no better way of slowing the aging process than lots of loving care and plenty of company.

Ask the 136-foot Marabell that nosed back into her Inner Harobor berth on the weekend.

The 30-year-old vessel that began her chequered career as an American minesweeper and served a 14-year stint as a hydrographic survey ship until she was replaced by the CSS Parizeau, is as skittish as a girl again.

She gleams with paint and is even so frivolous as to have a potted plant mounted in her stern!

Owned by Caude Lacerts, who quit the navy two years ago to acquire his wooden-hulled mistress, the Marabell's rejuvenating process has been quickened by the charter trips she's undertaken to Alaska and other places this season.

Take Mr. Adams, MD, as an example.

"Mr. Adams is a retired fireman," Lacerte explains. "He adds the MD after his name because way back he was a mule driver! He celebrated his 80th birthday aboard."

Lacerte recounts how Adams never ran out of stories to tell on the two-week cruise to Alaska and back.

"He never repeated himself once," he says. "He'd have the wheelhouse stories that he'd tell when the men were all up topside and another brand for the dining room when ladies were present."

The octogenarian now has a new lease on life:

"He's made the Marabell his hobby," Lacerte says, "The minute he left the ship he said he was going to start saving up for next year!"

There were members of the younger set, too, to help make Marabell forget she is a dowager.

"The Gallo wine family of California were on board for a couple of weeks. There were eight of them, plus a nurse for the children," Lacerte explains.

Even with the good times — nosing into coves in the wilderness, cruising gently so that her admirers could relish the beauty of the west coast — the obliging Marabell never forgot that part of growing old gracefully is continuing to be useful.

Never did she prove her usefullness more than in the tough run between the northern tip of Vancouver Island and Calvert Island.

"She took it well," reports her proud master, "Even though there were great big swells. We lashed down everything and advised everyone to lie down on their bunks. She came through like a trooper."

With the season over, Marabell can rest a while but she'll never lack the company for which she's developed a penchant.

Lacerte's wife and children are as much in love with the Marabell as he is.

"They say they'll never go shore again," he asserts.

Gem Ends 23-Year Run

When the words "The End" flash on the screen at the Gem Theatre in Sidney Saturday night, they will apply not only to the movie Big Jake, but to the theatre as well.

After 23 years and nine months of family movie screening, the Gem will wind up its career and the building on Beacon Avenue will be leased as a store.

Opened in 1950 by Mr. and Mrs. R. N. Martman and their son, Bob, the Gem screened 52 different family movies a year since The Inspector General, starring Danny Kaye, hit the screen.

Martman admits current trends in movie-making has made it increasingly difficult for him to find that many family movies each year.

"The houses in Victoria," he said, "could cut down on the number of films per year by holding some over for two weeks or more. We had to find a new one every week.

"If you're looking for reasons for closure, it's simply a lack of business — and there are many reasons behind that. There are many calls on the time of prospective customers."

Saanich Blueprints Lasting Green Belts

A decisive step in keeping Saanich green will be taken at the next meeting of council when a total of 27 municipal parks will be considered for permanent reservation.

If all 27 are reserved a total of 181.83 acres will be saved for parks and outdoor recreation.

Agate, Allenby, Blair, Copley, Claremont, Falaise, Glanford, Hampton, Horner, Knockan Hill, Konukson, Lakeside, Lambrick, Maynbard, Meadow, Memorial Gore, the Saanich portion of Mount Douglas, Onyx, Playfair, Prospect Lake South, Prospect, Qu'Appelle, Reynolds, Springridge, Tillicum, Vantreight and Weatherby.

Reservation of these areas will prevent any strip of land in them being used for road widening or any other municipal purpose other than recreation.

Action on 133.3-acre Cedar Hill Park was delayed on the advice of Mayor Hugh Curtis.

"We should be absolutely certain," he said, "that the boundaries of Cedar Hill are exactly as we would wish them to be."

The committee decided that action on Cedar Hill should be taken early in 1974 as soon as the permanent boundaries have been established.

In answer to a question from Curtis, assistant planner Gil Laurenson assured the committee the reservation of parkland permits municipal facilities, such as a park-keeper's house and recreation buildings to be erected.

Municipal solicitor Doug Patterson will be asked to confirm this is the case — particularly at Lambrick and Hampton parks.

Girl's Body Under Bed

NEW YORK (UPI) — Police said they found the body of a young woman apparently dead for the past 10 days lying under her boyfriend's bed. The body was wrapped in tin and plastic foil and covered with varnish.

Officers said they found the body after the suspect, Raul Colon, 28, told Dr. Rosiland Fruendlich, a psychotherapist, that he had stabbed and strangled Renee Hoffman, 24, in an apartment they shared in Brooklyn.

Colon was arrested.

Human Pot Train Shot Up

JACUMBA, Calif. (UPI) — Border patrolmen, alerted by Vietnam-type intruder sensors, tracked down a human pack train of Mexicans carrying marijuana through the darkness Tuesday and fought a gunbattle less than 400 yards north of the border.

Three marijuana-packers were killed and one border patrolman was wounded. A man believed to be waiting to receive the marijuana was arrested.

The rest of the band, believed to number about seven, fled back across the border, eluding pursuit through the rugged, scrub-covered mountains about 70 miles east of San Diego.

Police in Tecate, on the Mexican side of the border, reported capturing a man believed to be one of the fleeing smugglers, and said that three of those who escaped may have been wounded by the U.S. officers' gunfire.

The wounded officer, Norman Barry, 31, was struck in the side by a .22-calibre bullet, which skimmed around his chest along a rib, without breaking the rib or entering the chest cavity. He was released from Scripps Memorial Hospital in San Diego after treatment.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A youth who said he pleaded guilty to a charge because he thought it would get him out of jail faster was allowed to change his plea to not guilty in Victoria provincial court Tuesday.

"I've never heard anything so illogical in my life," Judge William Ostler said in granting the change of plea. "I can't think of worse grounds . . . it's absurd."

However Kevin Michael Barnabe, 18, of 925 Woolston St., maintained he was in jeopardy of losing his job and, unless he pleaded guilty, he said, he wasn't sure when he would get out of jail.

The youth had been arrested for causing mischief after he and four juveniles allegedly crashed a house party Sept. 15. He pleaded guilty Sept. 17.

Defence counsel applied for the change of plea because the juveniles involved in the incident had pleaded not guilty and because Barnabe was not represented by counsel the day he pleaded.

Ostler asked the youth why he pleaded guilty in the first place if he understood the charge as he said he had.

"I knew I could get out of jail faster that way," he replied.

Remarked the judge: "I doubt if many people accused of criminal offences would use that line."

The case was remanded to Nov. 20 for trial before Judge F. S. Green.

"Here's a boy with a long history of cognate offences," Ostler began in sentencing Robert Bruce Moyes, 17.

Then turning to the accused, added, "And that is sad to say about a boy as young as you are." He meant all offences were related.

The youth was facing sentencing in connection with a charge of possession of stolen property — a 1959 Pontiac — laid after police caught him joy riding Sept. 18.

He was also facing sentencing for failing to appear in court the next day to answer the charge.

He appeared in court Monday and pleaded guilty.

Ostler noted Moyes had been in Haney Correctional Institute before and has also been on probation.

"Many things have been tried," he said, ". . . but there has been no change in your criminal behavior.

"This sort of conduct is only going to end up with your spending more and more time in jail," he warned.

So saying he imposed a four-month jail term, concurrent on each charge, with the recommendation it be served in a forestry camp.

In the court section of Judge Harold Alder, Andrew Tofin, 1154 Empress Ave. was sentenced to 14 days in jail after he pleaded guilty to impaired driving. The sentence will be served on seven consecutive weekends.

Tofin was charged after the car he was driving collided with a telephone pole at Johnson and Fernwood Sept. 2. Five people were injured in the mishap and $1,000 damage done, police said.

Judge Alder also prohibited Tofin from driving in Canada, except for business purposes, for three months.

Angry Residents Disrupt Meeting

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Royal commission inquiry into the use of pesticides and herbicides was interrupted repeatedly Tuesday night by angry residents.

A Galiano resident who identified himself only as "Dan" accused B.C. Hydro of chemical spraying which contaminated the family's water supply and resulted in his daughter being born with a deformity.

Another protestor, Mrs. J. D. MacAdam, said she wanted to present a brief on behalf of the Informed Citizens Union which opposes chemical spraying near homes.

Commission chairman Cortland J. G. Mackenzie attempted to keep the meeting in order but was interrupted several times by shouts directed at chemical association representatives.

The protests began while the Canadian Agricultural Chemicals Association was submitting a brief recommending that "it be recognized that pesticides are essential for food production and human health in our modern economy."

It also recommended that new regulations on the sale and use of pesticides be based on objective appraisal of scientific evidence and not on public opinion.

The association said, where possible, control of pests by chemicals should be integrated with cultural and biological methods of control.

A brief from the B.C. Cattlemen's Association said a practical alternative to chemical pest control does not now exist and chemicals are the only sure means by which animal and forage production can be increased.

HOG FARM 'CHAOS'

MELFORT, Sask. (CP) — Saskatchewan Liberal leader Dave Stewart said Tuesday a disaster situation prevails in the province's hog industry and he blames the NDP government for it.

He said the government's decision to set up a provincial hog marketing commission without a producer plebiscite and the setting of "unrealistic prices" for feed grains has resulted in dozens of farmers leaving the industry.

The Day They All Liked Dave

In the middle of angry debate over farm legislation Tuesday, MLAs took a rare 15-minute recess to celebrate one of the happier issues of the day — Premier Barrett's 43rd birthday.

They adjourned to the legislative dining room where the jovial premier cut a small cake covered with sugar roses and dogwoods and passed out pieces to MLAs and staff.

"Will Ray Haynes jump out the cake?" asked Garde Gardom (L, Vancouver-Point Grey) as opposition leaders paid tribute to the premier. Gardom was referring to the secretary-treasurer of the B.C. Federation of Labor, currently at odds with the government over new labor legislation.

Earlier, in the house, Education Minister Eileen Dailly began a round of birthday congratulations which were taken up by opposition spokesmen.

Liberal Leader David Anderson said he wished the premier a happy birthday and added that Barrett's age had finally caught up with his waistline "somewhere in the forties."

Socred house leader Frank Richter said he was happy Barrett had finally come of age "so we can expect some maturity of him."

The premier kept a running joke about his birthday most of the day and, in the morning just before the regular cabinet meeting was about to begin, came out of the executive chamber and told reporters he was appointing a new cabinet.

"There's no present in there for me," he said.

BLACKS BACKED

DETROIT (UPI) — A federal court judge ordered Michigan's largest electric company Tuesday to pay $4 million to its black employees and to sharply increase its black managerial force.

In a 70-page ruling, U.S. district court judge Damon Keith said he found Detroit Edison Electricity Company guilty of prolonged and systematic racial discrimination.

He assessed it $4 million in punitive damages and also fined one of two local unions involved in the case $250,000 for fostering discrimination.

Keith also ordered the company to promote one black as foreman or supervisor every time it promotes a white.

In addition, he ordered the company to end all intelligence and aptitude testing, to fill every fourth high-level white-collar job with a black and to make three of every 10 employees a black as soon as possible.

Basic Issues Remain

CALGARY (CP) — A six-day Alberta Energy Board hearing to re-examine a natural gas export permit ended Tuesday with basic issues raised still unresolved.

The board, on the instructions of the Alberta cabinet, was reviewing a permit issued in 1969 to Consolidated Natural Gas for removal and sale of gas to the United States.

The gas later was sold to TransCanada Pipelines for sale to Ontario utilities.

Ontario opposed any amendment of the Consolidated permit on the grounds that a reduction in gas deliveries would have a serious effect on that province's users.

Ontario lawyers argued the validity of Alberta's Gas Resources Preservation Act and of the order-in-council issue by the Alberta Cabinet to call the hearing.

The board reserved decision on the validity of the act and the order despite requests from Ontario lawyers that it make a decision on the matter.

The Ontario attorney-general's department now is seeking permission from the Alberta attorney-general to take the matter to the Alberta Supreme Court.

If successful, Ontario would ask the court to instruct the energy board to make a ruling on the validity of the Alberta legislation in question and the order-in-council.

Evans Returns Summit Visit

OLYMPIC, Wash. (CP) — Washington Governor Dan Evans has scheduled a summit meeting with Premier Dave Barrett in Victoria Oct. 18 and 19.

The visit repays a visit to Olympic by Barrett earlier this year. Barrett gave the first-ever address by a B.C. premier to the state representatives.

IN ICY VICTORIA . . .

Provincial Natural Resources Minister A. E. Stairs of New Brunswick said he phoned home to Woodstock on Tuesday and while it was 45 degrees in Victoria it was 65 in New Brunswick.

Several other delegates were sniffling and complaining of the cold wind.

Host Leo Nimsick, provincial mines minister, said that while delegates might not gain from the convention, they at least had had a good sample of Victoria weather.

"I hope not!" said a delegate.

Man Held in Slaying of Teachers

CHRISTIANSTED, V.I. (AP) — A black man from the British Caribbean island of Montserrat has been charged with the murder of two white United States school teachers on the troubled island of St. Croix.

The young women and an islander who was shot in the back Monday night brought to 17 the total number of white persons slain on the Caribbean resort island in the last 13 months. Most of the murders are still unsolved.

James Kirnon, 20, was arrested for the killing of the two school teachers and charged in federal court with first-degree murder. He was remanded to jail in lieu of $50,000 bail.

Police said the women were Betsy Reedy, 26, of Bethel, Conn., and Cheryl Barr, 22, from North Miami, Fla. They had been living on St. Croix about a year.

The two women were reported to have gone on a beach party Sunday. Their bodies were found Monday night 30 feet from their car on a beach.

The third victim, Henry Berry of St. Croix, was shot in front of a Christiansted bar.

The plague of killings began when five black men invaded the Fountain Valley Country Club Sept. 6, 1972, robbed it and sprayed the terrace restaurant with machine-gun fire, killing seven whites and a black employee of the club. Five islanders were sentenced to life imprisonment for the killings.

Seven other local blacks were arrested for a restaurant robbery in November, 1972, in which two white men were killed and a third wounded.

Alberta Urges Talk

Ottawa could head off the current dispute between Alberta and eastern Canada over resource development if it would consult with Edmonton before deciding energy policies, Alberta Resources Minister Bill Dickie said in Victoria Tuesday.

He said Ottawa should stop taking unilateral actions and begin meaningful consultations with the provinces.

Dickie said in an interview the federal government should summon a national energy conference as soon as possible so the provinces can have a voice in resource development.

Dickie was in Victoria Tuesday to attend the national convention of provincial mines ministers.

He and Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed are scheduled to meet federal Energy Minister Donald Macdonald in Edmonton today to discuss the possibility of a national energy conference.

Dickie said such a conference could well come to the conclusion the federal government should set up a federal marketing board for petroleum products.

Or it could urge the formation of provincial marketing boards.

"Calling the conference is the important first step and, as far as Alberta is concerned, the sooner the better," Dickie said.

"It could involve many people but should — must — include first ministers of the provinces."

Dickie said the policy of the Alberta government would be to increase the price of petroleum products as quickly as possible but it had not yet decided how.

Alberta was hopeful such decisions could be taken at a national conference as part of a national policy and not by a province acting alone.

Dickie several times said a national marketing board could be the solution to the problem of contrary petroleum policies among provinces.

However, he added, it was not an official government position, simply an idea being tossed out for discussion.

He said Ottawa should not act without consulting the provinces and he hoped Alberta would not have to take steps that would run counter to national petroleum policies.

The government would press for a national energy conference, hopefully having a meeting time set and agenda completed by November.

The Alberta government has been critical of Ottawa for freezing the price of Alberta crude oil and putting a surcharge tax on exported oil.

The supply of export oil has also been reduced about 20 per cent by the federal government.

Meanwhile, Ontario and Alberta are engaged in a legal battle over whether Edmonton can divert its export of 350 million cubic feet of natural gas per day to the U.S. The gas has been flowing to the Ontario market.

Ontario argues Alberta has no jurisdiction over natural gas after it has been authorized to leave the province and is declared surplus to provincial needs.

THEY COLOR IT AMBER FOR THEIR HOT DOGS!

Is there a problem with hot dogs in Saanich?

This was the question asked by Ald. William Noel when the finance committee met Tuesday.

"Why does the SPCA van have an amber light flashing on the top," he queried, "Do we have hot dogs?"

Ald. Leslie Passmore suggested the amber light was needed to protect the pound catcher from being run down by cars, as he left the highway to rush "across the meadow with his net out."

Projects assistant Dick Gibson told the committee that the light acted as a warning when the van was parked on streets and highways.

"Last week," Gibson said, "he had to help a horse that was lying in the middle of West Saanich Road. That's the sort of time when the light comes in handy."

Gibson told the committee that for the third year in succession canvassers had covered the municipality from June 1 to Sept. 4 finding 1,116 dogs that had no licences.

Monday Closings

Liquor stores, libraries, post offices, and most shops will be closed Monday for Thanksgiving Day holiday.

Local, provincial and federal government offices also are closed.

The Provincial Museum will open Saturday, Sunday and Monday from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

WIDEN PARTNERSHIP

Mayors Ask Province To Share Royal Cost

While marshalling council support in picking up the $250,000 price tag for the Royal Theatre two Greater Victoria mayors have asked the provincial government to help meet the bill.

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said Tuesday night:

"In the absence of any apparent definite move by Mayor (Peter) Pollen, other than casual conversations with government members, as mayor of Saanich I have written Minister of Recreation and Conservation Jack Radford to ask if the provincial government can help under the Community Recreation Facilities Fund Act."

He added, "I have every hope that the provincial government will look very sincerely at becoming a partner."

He added, "The government might wish to look at it under some other formula (of funding). There are potential sources that have not been fully explored."

Curtis' comments implying lack of initiative on the city's part in seeking provincial assistance were dismissed by Pollen today as an attempt to "make political hay."

At his press conference this morning Pollen produced a letter from Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall, replying to a letter Pollen had written Aug. 6, in which the mayor suggested a provincial contribution to the Royal Theatre acquisition.

★ ★ ★

Pollen said he had proposed a one-third contribution from the provincial recreation facilities fund, and Hall's reply indicated he would be discussing the matter with Radford.

The mayor said he had also been in touch with the federal ministry of urban affairs to investigate the possibility of assistance from Ottawa.

If the municipalities could be saved a significant portion of the $250,000 price tag, that amount could be spent on refurbishing the theatre and other improvements, he said.

Pollen said if Curtis had bothered to telephone and find out what the city was doing in seeking other means of financing it would have saved him some embarrassment.

Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford reports that the Royal Theatre purchase will be discussed at Tuesday's council meeting.

"I'm sure we will be supporting it," she said.

It will not be unanimous. Ald. John Goult said today he, for one, would not be in favor of the purchase:

"I've been mixed up with the arts all my life," he said, "I don't really think that these people understand what they're getting into when they contemplate buying a theatre."

Goult said it would be preferable to seek provincial assistance in building a permanent arts centre.

Esquimalt voted 6-1 against taking part in the purchase at last month's council meeting but Ald. George McCreadie, who represents Esquimalt on the intermunicipal committee, says he will ask the council to reconsider its decision.

Beef Up Own Force C. Saanich Choice

Central Saanich has no choice now but to go ahead and beef up its own police force, Mayor Archie Galbraith said today.

Statements this week by both Saanich council and the RCMP saying they would not extend police services into Central Saanich "leaves us no alternative," Galbraith said.

A referendum, requested by some residents of the municipality on the question of police services, will not be held.

"That's the end of it now," Galbraith said. "We have tried both Saanich and the RCMP and they have both turned us down. We will go ahead with our own force and try to implement our updating recommendations as soon as possible."

The mayor said he hoped to call a special meeting of council and the police commission soon to recommend that a new chief for the force be picked as soon as possible, "maybe this week."

"That new chief has a lot of work to do and he's got to get started."

Galbraith will recommend that all suggestions contained in a report by Delta police chief Mervin Smith be implemented as soon as possible.

"We should be able to have everything going in a matter of six weeks," Galbraith said.

Smith's recommendations included the construction of a holding cell in the Central Saanich police station, the hiring of another officer, and the purchase of a breathalyser machine.

"I'm so pleased that the whole thing is finally settled," Galbraith said.

"I wasn't happy with the limited policing we've had without a regular chief. Now that we know where we stand we can get down to business and do something about it."

Galbraith said he hoped to meet with Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer next week "just to get an indication of his thoughts on our municipality and others.

"We don't want to go into too heavy capital expenditures this year and then find out next year that he has other ideas."

Assistant RCMP Commissioner Gordon Cunningham said the RCMP turned down Central Saanich's request for policing because, "we just don't have the manpower to take on any additional responsibilities in British Columbia."

"It's our policy not to add municipalities to the list we serve already," Cunningham said.

The RCMP's decision came Tuesday, the day after Saanich council turned down a similar request.

10,000 Wait To Be Bombed

By BRUCE OBEE
Times Staff

When the lights went out in Santiago's Estadio Nacional 10,000 prisoners waited in deathly silence to be bombed.

Bill Paterson, 20, of 2277 Gail Place, arrived at his Sidney home Tuesday night after 10 days of political imprisonment in the Santiago soccer stadium.

In a Times interview today Paterson told of the fear, the anger, the death and violence which has turned the country of Chile into a living nightmare.

"I was never handcuffed," said Paterson, "but every time we were moved somewhere it was the old hands behind the head and every time we stopped it was spread eagle against the wall."

Paterson and 177 other prisoners were held in a tiny change room inside the stadium.

Asked about the sanitary conditions Paterson replied, "What sanitary conditions?"

"We had to eat out of bowls that were just sort of rinsed out with cold water," he said.

Each morning the prisoners were served a cup of tea or coffee and bread. Lunch was half a bowl of broth and "if we were lucky we got another piece of bread."

That was the daily diet.

★ ★ ★

At the end of a hallway leading into the room was a "giant machine gun" waiting to greet anyone attempting to escape.

But the night the lights went out the stadium's 10,000 prisoners sat in dead silence expecting to be bombed.

Shortly after he was taken prisoner Paterson was interrogated about his political beliefs. Questions were asked in English but he was forced to answer in Spanish.

Paterson and his friend had been in Chile four weeks when they were seized at gunpoint Sept. 14 while asleep in their Los Andes hotel room.

"I was beaten when I was in Los Andes with a big rubber truncheon," he said.

Paterson complained of being continually beaten each time they were moved.

"One guy's beating you to go faster and the other guy's holding you by the neck and he won't let you run."

Finally, after 10 days of "hell," he was released.

Paterson says he'll go back to South America but "only as far south as Peru."

Free Sports Complex Because They Said No

Sidney residents may receive a free sports centre . . . because they refused to pay for one.

The residents turned down referendums in 1970 and 1972 to build a recreation complex opposite the Senior Citizen's Activity Centre on Resthaven Drive. But the local Kinsmen now have offered to construct a $68,000 milti-purpose open-air sports centre on the land.

The Kinsmen want to build a rink which could be used for lacrosse, roller hockey as well as ice hockey on the 1.64-acre site.

Although the centre would be built on city land and would be owned by the city when finished, Sidney taxpayers will not have to pay.

Project chairman Donald Day said Tuesday the Kinsmen will apply this week for a $43,000 local Initiatives Grant from the federal government to hire 12 unemployed men to build the complex.

Day said the Kinsmen would raise $25,000 on their own to puy materials needed for the centre, and to hire a foreman and co-ordinator.

He also said the Kinsmen would ask local businesses to donate labor and materials to keep down expenses.

Sidney council approved the proposed project Sept. 24, and if the grant is awarded construction could begin Dec. 1.

The project must be completed May 1 to comply with conditions of the grant.

'Extremely Poor Taste' Says Mayor

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

A handbill advertising an art exhibition at the Open Space centre on Fort Street was condemned as an example of "extremely poor taste" by Mayor Peter Pollen today.

Pollen said the illustration on the poster verges on the pornographic, and he is considering recommending to city council that it take a "dim view" of any future applications from Open Space for municipal financing.

A copy of the poster was displayed outside Open Space this morning, and Pollen said copies have also been on public view in other downtown buildings and sent through the mail.

He told reporters at his weekly press conference that Gene Miller, director of Open Space, claims the picture represents "the sun coming up over the Malahat."

The mayor said to the best of his knowledge the exhibition itself does not exploit sex, but a Times reporter who visited the exhibition this morning came away with a rather different impression.

Pollen said he is not a prude, but added: "I do think there is a marked deterioration in the moral values of our society and acceptance of the most distasteful things . . ."

After the Greater Victoria Intermunicipal committee recently endorsed a $4,100 grant application from Open Space, Victoria handed over its share — $1,656.

Oak Bay and Esquimalt have also agreed to share in the grant but Saanich has tabled the matter until it receives a detailed financial statement from the centre.

Go-Ahead On Malls

Victoria's long-discussed proposal for malls on Broad and View were given the go-ahead by city council in its caucus session Tuesday, with Mayor Peter Pollen expressing the hope the project would be completed by next summer.

The mall on Broad will extend from View to Yates, and on View from Douglas to Government.

Aldermen agreed that before the scheme gets into advanced planning stage, merchants in the area will be invited to participate fully in discussions.

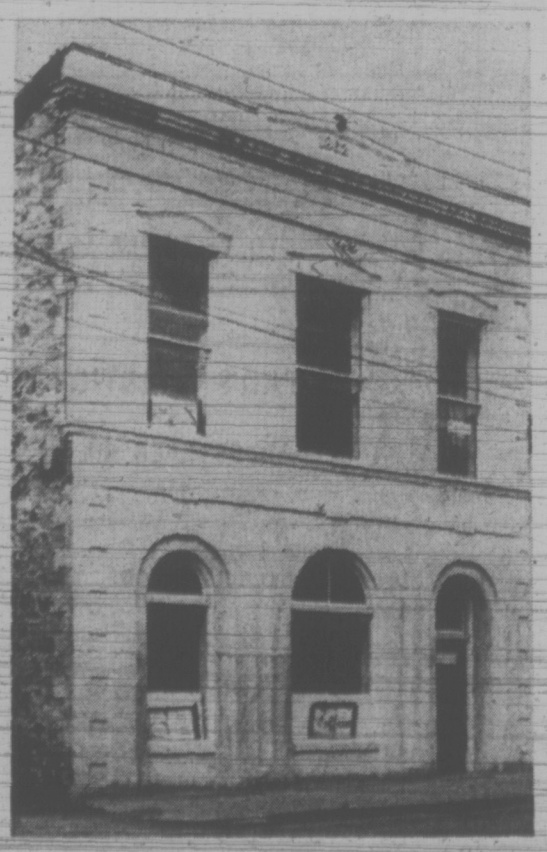
Deep-Frozen It Stood



A 111-year-old warehouse on Store Street just may have remained standing all these years because it was in a deep-frozen state.

But, if the building proves to be basically sound, city council may decide to save it from the bulldozers by designating it a heritage structure worthy of preservation.

Farmer Construction Ltd., which is a partner with Central Contract Parking Company in purchasing the Burns Food Ltd. property at 1618 Store, says in a letter to the city it had hoped to repair the building and lease it out for warehousing and office use.

But, the letter adds, Burns Foods recently turned off all the refrigeration "and in the thawing process we were astonished to discover that in an unfrozen state the building is not structurally sound."

Farmer Construction is now asking for a demolition permit, but before considering the matter council has asked city engineer James Garnett to report on the building's structural condition.

Ald. Sam Bawlf said Tuesday the warehouse must be one of the oldest commercial buildings in western Canada.

WOMAN, 46, DIES IN CAR-TREE CRASH

A 46-year-old Victoria woman died early this morning in a single car accident on Trans Canada Highway near Thetis Lake Park.

Colwood RCMP say Peggy Patricia Webb of 3081 Glen Lake Road was killed instantly when the car she was driving left the road and struck a tree, at about 2:30 a.m.

She was alone at the time.

$40,000 Pledge to Handicapped

Saanich's finance committee will recommend to council the municipality pay its share — $40,000 — of the $100,000 intermunicipal grant toward an activity centre for the handicapped on Vernon.

When approved, the $40,000 will be paid over a two-year period.

The centre is to be part of the Battin-Fielding complex for the handicapped and will be located beside 19 townhouses and a 60-unit apartment for handicapped persons.

The centre will provide therapy, work and recreation for about 200 people.

"This (the centre), is not a fly-by-night thing," Garth Homer, executive director of the Community Chest of Greater Victoria, told the committee Tuesday, "It was in the works when I came here 7½ years ago."

Mayor Hugh Curtis said Saanich "pioneered" the Battin-Fielding project, so had a particular interest in contributing to the intermunicipal grant.

Homer said the activity centre committee was still hopeful the federal government would match the provincial grant of $300,000.

He said two members of the federal health and welfare department had visited Victoria and "looked at the scheme."

"If we don't go ahead before the end of the year we'll lose some $200,000 (in promised donations)."

The intermunicipal committee has recommended $100,000 be paid over five-year periods by participating municipalities.

Oak Bay has already voted to pay its share on this basis.

Esquimalt Mayor Art Young said today the grant will probably be considered at tonight's council meeting and "probably be referred to council's finance committee.

"But I would hope, personally, that consideration will be favorable."

In Victoria, the activity centre grant application has been referred by council to manager J. H. Bramley for review and report.

In other business Tuesday, the finance committee agreed Saanich should pay its share of $2,250 for the operation of the 1973 Christmas Bureau.

Major Jack Barr said the Salvation Army would again organize the bureau and the $2,250 would mainly be used for wages.

Football in London, Tokyo If Gary's Plans Work Out

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gary Davidson, who helped start the American Basketball Association and the World Hockey Association, now has plans for an international professional football league with franchises stretching from London to Tokyo.

A source in the office of the Santa Ana, Calif., lawyer, who is president of the WHA, confirmed the league is being organized by Davidson.

"It will be the first international football league, and the organizers plan to have it working a year from now," the source said.

Initially, the league wants 12 franchises in the United States, with franchises already lined up for the Los Angeles area, Honolulu, New York, Boston, Chicago, Toronto "and maybe Europe" for the first season, said the source.

The league, as yet unnamed, also is looking to establish franchises in London, Tokyo, Germany and Mexico as well as Memphis, Tenn., Milwaukee, Phoenix, Ariz., Oklahoma City, Seattle, and North Carolina.

The source said some of those involved in the new venture include owner Robert Schmertz of Boston Celtics of the National Basketball Association; Nick Mileti, owner of the Cleveland Indians baseball team and Cleveland Cavaliers of the NBA; Howard Baldwin, president of New England Whalers of the WHA; and New York lawyer Steve Arnold, who helped sign many American Football League players before the league merged with the National Football League.

The new league will not try and fight established leagues for players, said the source.

"The league will get its players from semi-pro leagues, colleges, NFL and Canadian Football League players who play out their options and players cut by the leagues," the source said.

"They cut 100 players a year who could play somewhere if they had a chance. For example, a team has three or four tight ends and cuts one too late for him to find another team, so he can't play.

"But we're not going to try to outbid the NFL. We will try to avoid any price war."

The source said a formal announcement on the new league would be made near the end of October.

It was also learned that Davidson, who resigned as president of the ABA after getting it off the ground, would leave the WHA if the football league is started.

The Chicago Tribune says Davidson will own the team in Los Angeles or Anaheim.

The newspaper says the Toronto franchise has been awarded to John Bassett Jr., owner of the WHA Toronto Toros, and the Honolulu franchise has been awarded to Ben Hatskin, owner of Winnipeg Jets of the WHA.

Hatskin, however, said he is not a franchise holder but simply an organizer.

The newspaper says that franchises of the six charter members cost $250,000 but now the price is up to $500,000.

The Kings: To Regan 'A Team of Destiny'

This will be the eighth year for Larry Reagan under owner Jack Kent Cooke of the Los Angeles Kings of the National Hockey League, his seventh in competition as general manager, and he's got news for the Kings:

"This is a team of destiny," he said.

If it hasn't been that way — only two playoff appearances in six seasons, none in the last four, and a poor exhibition record this fall, Regan nonetheless sees better things ahead.

"I don't predict a playoff finish," Regan declared. "We will finish second. I'm convinced of that."

So he said it. But first there was that business this spring when the Kings blew a playoff chance in the final weeks with everything, mainly the schedule, in their favor.

"I wasn't disappointed, I was furious," Regan said of the final 16 games, 12 at home. "We thought the schedule could do it for us — get us into the playoffs — instead of doing it ourselves, and we finished three points out.

"Besides, we lost to the so-called weaker teams — Oakland, Vancouver, Pittsburgh; that's what hurt most. "Against Chicago we were three and zip at home."

Until Monday at Memorial Arena, Regan wasn't much happier. The Kings had lost three in a row to Vancouver, were soundly whipped by Montreal, and had saved some face by edging Minnesota, 2-1.

"Claude Ruel (Montreal's director of player development) and I both agreed both clubs had looked bad in that game — a 9-3 triumph by the Habs. "We were just awful," said Regan, who doesn't pull his punches.

'Stronger and Tougher'

There aren't many ifs, buts and maybes in his makeup. He doesn't pussyfoot or use evasive tactics, and if the training sessions had been mostly unproductive to date, he offered a reasonable explanation.

"We haven't looked that good and I believe it's because of the heavy work load, parimrily the tough conditioning program the players have been under. They haven't been able to relax. Now they can."

Then he pointed to the practice session under coach Bob Pulford. "They are showing more bounce out there today than on any other day," he said. "Right, John?" he asked rhetorically of chief scout John Maguire. Maguire nodded in assent.

"I think we are much stronger," said Regan. "Stronger and tougher." And "tougher" may be the key phrase he was leaning on. "We have to be meaner on defence than we were last season."

What Regan was implying was that two off-season acquisitions, a new confidence in the coach, and within the team itself, would make all the difference necessary to overcome last year's shortcomings.

The new players are Bob Murdoch and Randy Rota, acquired from Montreal for draft considerations. "We just have to improve with a fellow like Murdoch. He was a plus 43 player with Montreal, while Rota is the type of a hard-skating winger we definitely need. "And we need them now," which is why L.A. gave up draft picks.

L.A. Accepted as 'Home'

Regan also had nice things to say about two other late-season acquisitions, Frank St. Marseille, from St. Louis, and Dan Maloney from Chicago. "They should fit in better this year — Frank has played consistently well, while in Maloney we have a former first round draft pick, a tough kid, and a player on the way up. "It might be the best deal we made last year."

He indicated too he was happy with his goalkeeping, the defence, because of Murdoch would be stronger and there was no reason the club's leading pointmen last year, Mike Corrigan (37 goals); Bob Berry (36), Juha Widing (16-54—70 points) and Butch Goring (28 goals although missing most of 28 games with injury) shouldn't be as good or even better this time around.

Of Pulford he said: "I'm happy with him. Last year was his first, so he's got to be a better coach this season.

"Besides, there's a far better attitude on the club than ever before. You know, a year ago, there weren't any players who made their off-season home in L.A. Now there are 11. "I think that shows the confidence the players have in themselves, and in the team."

"They've got to learn to believe in themselves to win.

"I think they do, and I think it's the best team we've ever had."

Pulford's Fortunes Change

The coach of the Los Angeles Kings had a rough start to the current National Hockey League pre-season exhibition schedule when the best his hopefuls could manage was a tie in five games.

Prospects really dimmed a week ago when Kings played the first of three games at their Victoria Memorial Arena training site and lost 9-3 to the Stanley Cup champion Montreal Canadiens.

But all that has changed.

The Kings, in fact, will be after their third victory in a row tonight at Memorial when they entertain Vancouver Canucks in an 8 o'clock encounter.

Canucks were Los Angeles' latest victims — 6-3 losers to the Kings Tuesday night in Portland. The victory came on the heels of Kings' 2-1 decision over Minnesota North Stars Saturday night in Victoria and snapped Vancouver's pre-season unbeaten streak at six.

Bob Berry scored two goals for the Kings before 2,344 fans. Other Los Angeles goals were scored by Bob Nevin, Butch Goring, Juda Widing and Phil Maloney.

Andre Boudrias scored twice for Vancouver. Don Lever scored the first Vancouver goal at 6:06 of the second period.

Vancouver outshot Los Angeles 29-23. Rogation Vachon was in the net for the Kings while Ed Dyck and Jacques Caron shared the netminding duties for Vancouver.

The 31-year-old centre, who suffered a knee injury in the spring in a Stanley Cup playoff game, picked up two goals and an assist Tuesday night as the Bruins defeated Montreal Canadiens 6-4.

Esposito, who has won the NHL scoring title the last four years, also helped linemate Wayne Cashman to a big night. Cashman scored a goal and added three assists as Boston raised its exhibition record to four wins and a tie in seven games.

When Esposito was presented with the Lou Marsh trophy in August as Canada's outstanding athlete in 1972, he discounted a report that his knee was not mending on schedule and would keep him out of Boston's lineup until early 1974.

He underwent surgery after suffering torn knee ligaments when checked in the Stanley Cup contest by New York Rangers defenceman Ron Harris.

The Bruins trailed the Canadiens 4-2 in the second period until second-year forwards Gregg Sheppard and Fred O'Donnell and rookie Andre Savard scored within a three-minute span late in the period before 9,751 fans.

In other NHL games Tuesday, Chicago Black Hawks tied Toronto Mpale Leafs 3-3; Minnesota North Stars whipped St. Louis Blues 5-1; and New York Rangers and New York Islanders tied 6-6.

Billy Harris, 21-year-old right winger who had 50 points for the Islanders as a rookie last season, scored three goals. Defenceman Brad Park scored twice for the Rangers.

Each of Trailers Hopes to Find Stepping-Stone

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Canadian Football League's 1972 divisional champions find themselves in the uncomfortable position of bringing up the rear going into the final stages of the 1973 schedule.

And both Hamilton Tiger-Cats and Winnipeg Blue Bombers would like nothing better than to use the other as a stepping stone towards the playoffs.

They meet tonight in the only game in the CFL. It will be televised on the full CBC network beginning at 6 p.m. PDT.

The Eastern Conference Tiger-Cats trail third-place Ottawa by two points and second place Montreal by three.

The Blue Bombers, the defending Western Conference champions, are one point behind fourth-place B.C. Lions and four behind third-place Calgary Stampeders.

The Hamilton defence will have its hands full containing running back John Bledsoe and quarterback Don Jonas.

The game promises to be an offensive contest. The Tiger-Cats have scored more than 200 points in nine games, led by Ealey, receiver Garney Henley and the leading rusher in the East this season, Andy Hopkins.

The Winnipeg defence is the best in the West and second in the CFL only to Toronto, but when they have problems, it usually is against roll-out quarterbacks, such as Ealey. The sophomore quarterback is the fourth leading rusher in the East with 373 yards.

Ralph Sazio, Tiger-Cats general manager, said he is happy with his club's defensive play and expressed confidence in Ealey, who he said "could be suffering from the sophomore jinx.

"Last year he was a free soul. This year he started to think, which he has to do now, and he had an element of doubt in his mind, whether to run or throw."

Sazio said Ealey is hesitating now over things he did naturally last year, and defences have a better idea of what to expect from him than they had in his rookie season.

Baltimore Escapes Post-Season Boredom

BALTIMORE (AP) — Baltimore Orioles, after an agonizing year on the sidelines, are looking forward to what used to be their annual post-season baseball caper.

"Playing in October is a lot better than sitting in the closet, hiding and painting," outfielder Merv Rettenmund said. "That's what I did last year after we finished third."

The Orioles, who played in the World Series in 1969-70-71, bounced back this season to win the American League's Eastern Division, and Saturday they open a best-of-five playoff against Oakland Athletics, who won the Western Division.

"It has to be satisfying to win when we weren't picked to win," said outfielder Paul Blair. "But we haven't done anything yet. If we don't get into the World Series, everyone will ask again: 'What happened?'"

Shortstop Mark Belanger said he didn't know what to do when he found himself with free time last October.

"It cost $20,000 not to be in the World Series," he said, "and another $5,000 during the three weeks I spent fixing up our home."

Jim Palmer, a 22-game winner due to pitch the opener against Oakland, said the postseason play meant "it will take me longer this year to get my golf game in shape."

In Oakland, Jim (Catfish) Hunter said the Athletics' pitching is stronger than it was last year, "mostly because of the bullpen."

Rollie Fingers is the only reliever back from the bullpen crew of last season's World Series winners. Darold Knowles missed the 1972 playoffs with a broken thumb and Paul Lindblad and Horacio Pina were acquired in trades last winter.

"We have good, experienced starters and so do the Orioles," said manager Dick Williams. "I think our staff is better than theirs because of the bullpen."

"He wore us out this season," said Williams of the veteran who had 20 hits and seven walks against his team.

Belmont Bumps Margin

Belmont topped Parkland 15-6, 15-9 and tripped Oak Bay 15-1, 15-5 Monday to extend its lead in the High School Girls' Volleyball League to eight points.

Parkland, the host school, earned a split in the three-team, round-robin competition by winning 15-6, 15-5 over Oak Bay.

In other round-robins, Reynolds was 3-1, Mount View 2-2, and Esquimalt 1-3 at Reynolds while Mt. Douglas was 4-0, Victoria 2-2 and Claremont 0-4 at Victoria.

9½ TOES LEFT FOR LEDUC

Times News Services

Bob Leduc will play the World Hockey Association season on 9½ toes.

The Toronto Toros' left winger learned Tuesday night he will miss the first month of the campaign after part of his second toe was amputated following a freak accident in which he was pinned against a wall by a dolly carrying team equipment.

While Leduc was losing his toe, Vancouver Blazers lost two men through penalties and wound up losing an exhibition game, 4-2, to Edmonton Oilers in Calgary.

Ross Perkins' power-play goal in the third period doused the Blazers, breaking a 2-2 tie. Doug Barrie gave the Oilers an insurance marker late in the third.

The first two periods of the game were scoreless as the teams resorted to tight checking.

Rejean Houle opened the scoring for Quebec at 3:18 of the third period and the Nordiques made it 2-0 at 10:12 on a goal by Andre Gaudette.

The Cougars then struck for two goals in 39 seconds as Joe Hardy scored at 14:26 and Bob Whitlock beat goalie Richard Brodeurat 15:05. The teams then battled through a 10-minute overtime period.

Libbers Close In on IOC

VARNA, Bulgaria (AP) — The International Olympic Committee (IOC) faces a different type of problem at the 10th Olympic Congress today.

In the first two days of the congress, speakers have called for reforms in running the Games with sports federations challenging the supreme authority of the IOC.

Willie Daume, an IOC vice-president from West Germany, is scheduled to bring the latest challenge to the IOC in one of three major addresses today.

Daume said he would suggest that women be chosen as members of the IOC, whose membership is old, male and heavily weighted with royal and noble titles.

"I'm sure the IOC will accept my suggestion," Daume said. He said it is likely that most of the several vacancies in the 74-member IOC will be filled at a meeting in Vienna next year, but that one or two may be chosen at an IOC session here following the congress.

Former Olympic skier Suzy Chaffee, member of the United States Olympic Committee, said the Olympic movement needs the humanism women members would bring to the IOC.

She is at the congress privately as a campaigner for athletes' rights, more representation for athletes and a change in the eligibility rules.

More important support came from Lord Killanin, IOC president, who in his opening speech said there should be no discrimination against women in Olympic bodies "indeed in the International Olympic Committee."

After the second day of the congress, the Russians held a news conference on their plans for holding the 1980 Summer Games and ran into some hostile questions.

Reporters asked about alleged maltreatment of Israeli athletes and exclusion of Jewish spectators at the World University Games at Moscow last August.

"We had nothing to do with any incidents," said Sergei Pavlovi, a top Soviet sports official and member of the Russian Olympic Committee. "All spectators were admitted according to the tickets they had purchased."

Earlier, Dick Pound, 32, secretary of the Canadian Olympic Association, urged delegates not to lose sight of the most important part of the Olympic movement — the athletes.

"We exist for the athletes, not vice-versa," said Pound, who added that unless the delegates recognize and accept this fact "we risk losing the athletes and eventually the Olympic movement."

Runners Repeat Wins

Ulla Hansen and Tom Griffin, both of Mt. Douglas, repeated last week's victories in the second Inter-High School Cross-Country League meet Monday at Beaver Lake Park.

Miss Hansen won the 1.7-mile girls' race with a time of 10 minutes, 38 seconds. Jill McLeod of Claremont came second and Cathy Bertola of Mt. Douglas was third.

Griffin placed first in the 3½-mile boys' event with a 17:27 clocking while Mike Long of Mt. Douglas finished second and Brian Blamey of Oak Bay was third.

Claremont won the girls' team event with Mt. Douglas and Mount View tied for second and Oak Bay third while Mt. Douglas, Belmont and Claremont finished one-two-three in the boys' team race.

Low Pink Salmon Returns Not Due to Gillnetters

One of the most frequent gripes bandied about by sports fishermen in recent weeks has concerned the lack of pink salmon catches in what was supposed to be a bumper year.

And most have pointed an accusing finger at net fishermen working the sports-fishing reserve boundary at Sheringham Point.

Is the commercial catch hurting the pink fishing?

"I'm not taking anybody's side — these are just the facts. If you ask my opinion, I would say it isn't," he replied.

Brooks, an ardent conservationist who aided the ACS fry-feeding program in Sooke and spearheaded many of the fry salvage programs from the upper part of De Mamiel Creek, said the pinks ran "a little bit different" this year.

"The people who hit them got limits and yet the majority out there only got one or two.

"I left Sooke Harbour at 8 o'clock one Saturday morning and was meeting boats coming in that had all limited. They were practically jumping in the boat."

When he went to check on the boats still on the water, Brooks found a lack of fish. Scouting around further, he found a vast school of jumpers and finners where the first boats had been — well offshore — and nary a boat around.

"They were further out in the straits but the fish definitely went by—so you can't blame the nets."

Something that a majority of sportsmen don't realize is that the netters once petered out to only one boat.

"But it's the same old thing in the newspapers (not this one though)," said Jack. "The nets are across Juan de Fuca . . . No fish . . . What happened to our big run?"

"This has happened before."

Replying to a question on the number of netters working the boundary, Brooks replied:

"There aren't more boats out there. There's less. I've had as many as 350 gillnetters at Sooke and only had an average of 23 this summer."

But the sports boats have been increasing.

"It's nothing to have over 1,000 boats between Sheringham and Pedder Bay—which is my area."

"Mind you, this bears out from days when the traps operated. If they didn't get the proper wind and tide the traps missed them too.

Jack added the sports catch dropped off "as soon as those traps went out" because the leads held the fish in the area for a certain length of time.

True, the nets aren't to blame for the lack of pink success this season.

But there's no doubt in my mind that they have had adverse affects on specific runs of coho. Like that mid-September run which provided excellent bucktail fishing in Cowichan Bay.

Now the coho bucktailing season in the bay peaks in mid-November. Migration paths might also change as hatchery-reared salmon begin to make up a significant portion of the population.

And sometimes there is a low catch, simply because the fish refuse to bite—as is now happening in Alberni Inlet.

Interception fishing by netters should be phased out in favor of a selective river-mouth fishery. This latter method of harvesting is subject to tighter controls than is the case at present.

We should also strive to build up populations through enhancement of spawning potential in small streams and the larger rivers.

Then, perhaps, we may again see the numbers of salmon which inhabited this coast

NIBBLES: Ian Smith, regional wildlife biologist for Vancouver Island, telephoned from Courtenay on Tuesday to tell me of another successful transplant of Canada geese . . . Ten goslings were taken from lakes within the Greater Victoria watershed earlier this summer and moved into the Comox area and seven subequently moved down to the estuary in Comox Harbour. Hence, the estuary will be closed to goose hunting this season and until further notice . . . It also appears that some of the geese transplanted to the Nimpkish area have successfully mated and a viable population—the aim of the experiment — is on its way to becoming a reality.

RECORD SALE OF YEARLINGS

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Castleton Farm of Lexington, owned by Fred Van Lennep, sold 76 yearlings Tuesday night at the Tattersalls fall yearling sales — for $1,872,300.

Outstanding, by Good Time out of Stand By, sold for $175,000. The colt was purchased by Sam Hutterbauer of Cincinnati.

Canucks Ousted In Net Tourney

QUEBEC (CP) — Two of Canada's brightest tennis hopes went down to defeat Tuesday in the second day of competition in a $50,000 international tennis tournament.

Canadian veteran Mike Belkin was narrowly beaten by Pakistan's Haroon Rahim, 6-4, 7-5, while Britain's Ken Battrick easily downed Kit Carpenter of Canada, 61, 6-4.

Winner of the tournament, being held at Laval University here, will take $9,000 in prize money.

Glenlyon Takes Lead

Glenlyon moved into the lead by playing to a 2-2 deadlock with St. Michael's University School in an Independent Schools under-11 round-robin soccer tournament match Tuesday at Windsor Park.

The tie, plus one win, gives Glenlyon the top berth while St. Michael's has the tie and Cliffside the loss.

All Systems 'Go' Without 'A' Label

By JIM CREBAR
Times Staff

There will be no "A" label for the Pacific International Junior Hockey League this season, at least as far as the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association is concerned.

But all systems are go as far as the seven league members — including Victoria Maple Leafs — are concerned.

The CAHA turned down a request for "A" status from the new league at a weekend meeting in Toronto. Monday in Vancouver, team representatives met and decided to go ahead as planned this season.

"We've done a lot of spadework and I'd hate to see it fall through now," said Doug Anderson, general manager of the Leafs, Tuesday.

The PIHL was represented in Toronto by Ivan Temple of Victoria, secretary-manager of the B.C. Amateur Hockey Association. Temple conceived the league as an alternative for boys wanting to play Junior "A" hockey without long schedules and travel commitments.

"They wouldn't give us Junior "A" status," said Temple, "so we will operate in a special category of junior hockey this season.

"They told us to apply next year and we will do so next May at the annual meeting of the CAHA in Winnipeg."

Temple added that the CAHA granted the PIHL permission to sign players to junior cards, without regard to "A" or "B" classification.

"Our players won't have to worry," he said. "We're no outlaw league."

PIHL officials had pinned their "A" status hopes on a clause in the CAHA constitution that leaves it to the branch members to determine the status of teams.

Temple said the branches supported the constitution but voted the request down, saying they had to abide by the wishes of the Junior Council.

Temple also said that Gordon Juckes of Ottawa, secretary-manager of the CAHA, expressed dissatisfaction with the name of the league, objecting to the word "International."

"He didn't give any reason for his objection," Temple said: "I can't understand it in view of the fact that there already is a Western International Hockey League (Senior "A") operating in B.C. I'm going to write and ask him what he wants us to do — chance the name of the WIHL?"

Temple said he had heard of no clubs pulling out of the league as a result of the CAHA decision. That would mean the league will open Friday night with the Leafs meeting Nor West Caps in Vancouver and playing Surrey Stampeders in Surrey Saturday night.

Leafs' home opener is against Surrey next Monday night at Memorial Arena at 8. Coach Al Grien and assistant Dennis Ferrill will be permitted to dress 15 players and two goalies.

Other teams in the league are Coquitlam Comets, Richmond Sockeyes, Seattle Totems and Portland Buckaroos. Each club plays a 40-game schedule, ending March 3 and followed by playoffs.

The winner will not be allowed to challenge for the Centennial Cup, embematic of Canadian Tier Two Junior "A" supremacy.

But as Temple said:

HE'LL ORGANIZE 'LITTLE GUYS'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new organization has been formed for sports fans who believe that more than lung power is needed to have their voices heard.

Fans Inc., a non-profit corporation, was established to represent the interests of the little guy against the professional team owners and the players who "have been organized in order to fight for their own very narrow, special interests.

"Too often, the sports fan has been abused and had no place to turn," said Charles V. Reilly Jr., 34, a public relations man from Wilmington, Del.

He said the group will seek fan opinion on major issues through questionnaires.

Reilly will be corporation president, and Catherine Perle, 54, a Wilmington grandmother of eight, will be vice-president.

Among topics to be taken up will be "the question of pay television, unresolved leadership in amateur athletics, the possibility of forming a federal sports commission and whether anti-trust exemptions currently enjoyed by professional sports are in the best interests of the fans and the country," he said.

Arsenal Falls To Tranmere

LONDON (Reuter) — Third Division Tranmere Rovers eliminated Arsenal, the famous First Division side, from the English Football League Cup here Tuesday night.

Eddie Loyden scored the 70th minute goal which carried Tranmere to their upset 1-0 win and put them through to the third round.

Loyden, who cost Tranmere about $17,500 two years ago when making the seventh move of his career from Chester, seized on a mistake by England international Bob McNab and shot the ball home from close range.

Another Third Division club, Walsall, also played magnificently in the same competition to draw 0-0 with Manchester City of the First Division.

PETE ROSE

NEW YORK (AP) — Pete Rose, the hustling Cincinnati Reds outfielder, and Rod Carew, Minnesota Twins' steady-hitting second baseman, earned the batting titles as the regular 1973 baseball season ended this week.

ROD CAREW
. . . A.L. champ

Rose, 31, who won the National League hitting crowns in 1968 and 1969, batted .338 with 230 base hits and finished 18 percentage points ahead of his closest rival Cesar Cedeno of Houston Astros hit .320.

The exciting Cincinnati outfielder nicknamed "Charlie Hustle" has batted over the .300 mark the last nine seasons.

In the American League, Carew had no trouble gaining his third hitting title, with a .350 average and 203 hits. The second baseman piled up a 44-point bulge over first baseman George Scott of Milwaukee Brewers and designated hitter Tommy Davis of Baltimore Orioles, who each hit .306.

Carew, 28, has hit .300 plus for the last five years.

Atlanta's Dave Johnson hit 43, a major league record for second basemen. Darrell Evans added 41 and Hank Aaron, who finished the season one short of Babe Ruth's record 713 career homers, hit 40.

The Braves were the first team to have three players hit at least 40 homers each in the same season.

Reggie Jackson of Oakland Athletics took American League honors with 32 homers. He also led the league with 117 runs batted in and was the 10th leading hitter with a .293 average.

Jim (Catfish) Hunter of Oakland was far and away the best percentage pitcher, finishing with a 21-5 record for .808. Baltimore Orioles Jim Palmer, 22-9 and .710 was second.

In the National League, Los Angeles Dodgers' Tommy John, 16-7, for .696 edged Don Gullett of Cincinnati, 18-8, .692.

Nolan Ryan, the rapid righthander from the Angels, broke Sandy Koufax's major league mark for strikeouts when he fanned Minnesota's Rich Reese, the final batter he faced in the 1973 season, for his 384th strikeout of the American League campaign.

Lou Brock of St. Louis Cardinals stole 70 bases to lead the National League in that category for the third year in a row and the seventh time in the last eight years.

Tommy Harper of Boston Red Sox led the American League with 54 steals.

MT. DOUGLAS STRING INTACT

Alix Bawlf scored two goals and that made the difference in a 4-2 victory over Victoria High as Mount Douglas ran its unbeaten streak to four games in high school girls' field hockey Tuesday.

Other Mount Doug scorers in the game, played at Vic High, were Cindy Majocha and Sue Anderson. Leslie Godfrey got both Victoria markers.

Oak Bay, in second place and unbeaten in three games, downed Claremont 2-0 at Oak Bay on two goals by Cindy Bray. Goalie Debbie Fillmore got the shutout.

Norfolk House and Mount View failed to break their third-place deadlock by playing to a 1-1 tie at Norfolk House. A goal by Mary-Ann Wiggins with five minutes left gave Norfolk House the draw after Jan Cook shot Mount View into a first-half lead.

Belmont and Reynolds battled to a scoreless tie as did St. Margarets and Parklands in other games.

Rough Opener To Stockers

The Victoria Intermediate Hockey League opened on a rough note Tuesday night at Memorial Arena as Stockers North Americans tripped Ingraham Buckaroos 6-4.

Stockers scorers in the fight-punctuated contest were Errol Gouldon and Ray Mounsey, each with two goals, and Bob Merluk and Jerry Caldwell with one each. Buckaroo marksmen were Brian Barton, George Fuller, Brent Atkins and Bud Watt.

The first period was scoreless but Stockers jumped into a 3-2 lead in the second.

Initial Soccer Success

Belmont picked up its first victory in seven starts Tuesday by tripping luckless Parkland 3-1 in a Senior High School Soccer League match.

Playing on home turf, Belmont now has one draw and one victory while Parkland is winless in six starts.

Record Entry In Thunderbird

First major curling test of the season, the fourth annual Thunderbird Bonspiel, gets under way Thursday at three City clubs.

A record 112 rinks have entered the mixed event, including one from Halifax. Playland Curling Club is the host but matches also will take place at Racquet Club and Victoria Curling Club.

Trev Fisher of New Westminster has entered his 1972 national mixed championship rink from the Royal City Club but he is expected to get some tough competition from three strong Duncan foursomes skipped by Gary Merrett, Glen Harper and Fred Duncan.

Finals in all five events take place at 3:30 p.m. Monday at Playland.

Bucs Fire Coach

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pitching coach Mel Wright was fired by Pittsburgh Pirates of the National League Tuesday. The Pirates finished 2½ games behind New York Mets in the East Division and pitching was considered the weak link of the team. The Pirates finished the 1973 season with a 3.74 earned run average compared with 2.81 in 1972.

JOE FRAZIER

Ali-Frazier Bout Looms

NEW YORK (AP) — Madison Square Garden has called a news conference for 9 a.m. PDT Thursday, giving rise to speculation that the arena is ready to announce a heavyweight boxing rematch between Muhammad Ali and Joe Frazier.

Spokesmen for the Garden declined to go into details on the announcement other than to say that it involved a major fight to be held in the Garden after the first of the year.

Garden boxing officials have figured in intensive negotiations to arrange another bout between the two former champions, whose first meeting March 8, 1971, is reported to have grossed $20 million, with each fighter receiving $2.5 million.

On that occasion, Frazier, then an undefeated champion, won a decision over previously unbeaten Ali.

One of the problems of holding the return match in New York was that of taxation. In the previous fight, the state not only taxed both men on money earned in the state but also on revenues from closed circuit television overseas.

Both fighters said they would refuse to fight again in New York under such circumstances.

Bugner Prevails In Gruelling Test

LONDON (AP) — Big Joe Bugner of Britain retained his European heavyweight boxing title Tuesday night, outpointing chunky Bepi Ros of Italy in a gruelling 15-round fight at Royal Albert Hall.

He repeatedly tied up the over-eager Bugner, who had looked impressive in losing fights against former world champions Muhammad Ali and Joe Frazier within the last year.

Lang Gains Ground

ROSETOWN, Sask. (CP) — The federal feed grains program and Otto Lang's political status appeared a little more secure as the justice minister wound up a five-day speaking tour.

The largest audience of his Prairie tour jammed the hall here Tuesday night and gave Lang as enthusiastic a reception as could be expected from any group of farmers for a government spokesman.

Lang, minister responsible for the Canadian wheat board and Saskatchewan's lone Liberal member of Parliament, won frequent applause for his defence of the program and even provoked general laughter at jokes which yielded only faint smiles at the previous meetings.

At the end of the two-hour meeting, he was given an almost-unanimous standing ovation.

Exodus to Continue

REGINA (CP) — Emigration from Saskatchewan will continue and the province's total population may fall to 890,000 by 1976, an economist has predicted.

Total population lost by emigration between 1971 and 1976 may be 80,000 and could be more if Saskatchewan experiences a recession in coming years, Frank Besier, federal economist for the Saskatchewan district, says in the latest issue of Manpower Review, published by Canada Manpower.

The current population is an estimated 940,000.

Travel Costs Hit

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Winnipeg School Board has become the centre of a controversy over trustees' travel expenses, which have more than doubled since New Democratic Party trustees gained control.

Provincial Progressive Conservative Leader Sidney Spivak and City Councillor Olga Fuga, a former chairman of the Winnipeg School Board, have called for a complete investigation of travel expenses.

As well, the Conservative leader says he will propose legislation to prohibit a political party from interfering with the affairs of any elected municipal body, including school boards.

Jail Probe Opens

CALGARY (CP) — A public inquiry into allegations that four guards beat up four prisoners in the Spy Hill Jail has opened in Calgary.

The inquiry was ordered by Attorney-General Merv Leitch Aug. 14 after he received Warden James Jackson's report on the incident.

It was alleged that the guards beat up the prisoners on July 16 and 17 after a dispute which developed when prisoners complained that the lights were turned out too early.

Drunks Covered

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba Public Insurance Corp. henceforth will pay damages to innocent victims of drunk or impaired drivers, it was announced Tuesday.

William Uruski, cabinet minister responsible for Autopac, the government auto insurance agency, said the change in coverage is a major step forward.

Under most private insurance contracts, coverage is automatically invalid if the insured vehicle is operated by an impaired or drunk person.

Previously, the innocent victims had to take the impaired or drunk driver to court to sue him for damages and were not able to recover from Autopac.

Ballet Fire Spares Tour

TORONTO (CP) — Fire Monday at the historic St. Lawrence Hall, storehouse and rehearsal hall for the National Ballet of Canada, will not affect the ballet company's planned Western Canada tour or upcoming season, spokesman said Tuesday.

Gerry Eldrid, company general manager, said costumes destroyed in the blaze were not among those the company planned to use on the tour beginning Oct. 15 in Edmonton.

Joint Nuclear Force Proposed in Europe

By MURREY MARDER

WASHINGTON (WP) — Creation of a unified western European nuclear arms force to help spread the burden of defence inside the Atlantic Alliance was recommended Tuesday by a NATO study group.

The nuclear force, which would pool the existing French and British weapons systems, was proposed as part of a long-range plan in a study that took two years to complete.

This long-discussed, and politically-sensitive European nuclear projection, was coupled with emphasis on maintaining American nuclear power for over-all protection of the North Alantic Alliance, plus "sufficient North American conventional forces in western Europe" to supply "credible deterrence," now that the Soviet Union has achieved strategic nuclear parity with the United States.

The recommendations were made by the Committee of Nine, representing the North Atlantic Assembly, which is composed of parliamentarians from the 15 NATO countries. Sen. Jacob Javits (Rep. — N.Y.), who is chairman of the committee, and Rep. Wayne Hays (Dem.— Ohio), discussed the report at a press conference here Tuesday. The assembly will consider the report at its next meeting in Ankara, Oct. 21-27.

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, in a statement, welcomed the general theme of the report, without explicitly endorsing its specific proposals such as the call for a European nuclear force.

In a statement issued through a state department spokesman, Kissinger used the occasion of the report to revive the Nixon administration's emphasis on the linkage of defence, political and economic issues in Atlantic Alliance strategy and cost-sharing.

The United States was outmanoeuvred on its linkage concept earlier this month when the nine European Common Market countries produced their unified declaration on future relations with the United States, with no mention of the overlapping interests. Bargaining now is under way to try to compromise the differences, with the next meeting set for Copenhagen on Oct. 18.

President Nixon's projected European trip awaits the outcome of these negotiations and another set of negotiations with NATO on an intertwined set of principles.

Kissinger, in his comments Tuesday on the Committee of Nine report, said he "shares the committee's strong beliefs that the (Atlantic) relationships must be strengthened through more equitable defence burden sharing and a sounder understanding of the interplay between our security, political and economic relations."

Javits told newsmen that if Europe wants "a nuclear deterrent of its own, that is fine with us." But Javits also pointedly noted that U.S. support for nuclear forces in Europe first has to overcome "the falling away of France" from participation in the NATO defence system, which he said, "we most severely deplore."

For long-range objective, the report said:

"The European and North American members of the alliance should begin to plan now for the systematic coalescence of western Europe's defence capabilities—including nuclear arms—in order that Western Europe can serve as an equal partner allied with the United States and Canada by the North Alantic Treaty in the continued commitment to common defence in the 1980's."

"This implies," the report continued, "an increase in west European military self-reliance; and it calls for the gradual and orderly devolution of certain defence responsibilities from the United States to the western European countries — particularly to the countries of the emerging European union — or to institutions they could use or develop."

The report said that "in the meantime" action should be taken "to bring about additional co-ordination and mutual technical aid between the nuclear forces of France, Great Britain and the United States."

This was the point on which Sen. Javits said the question arises of French defection from the NATO military structure. On this key issue, however, the French participant in the study, Michael Habib-Deloncle, pointedly stated in one of his many reservations or dissents: "The withdrawal of France from the integrated commands of the Atlantic alliance has been an accomplished fact since 1966 and that fact is irreversible."

EXPENSES STRAIN NATO ACCORD

Manchester Guardian

BRUSSELS— The European allies are gearing themselves up for an argument over sharing defence costs which is almost certain to lead to severe strains within NATO in the next few months.

In response to U.S. pressure for a comprehensive "burden-sharing" agreement among the allies — which Washington would like to have signed and sealed by the end of the year— a group of experts will shortly come up with a list of facts and figures on the defence expenditure of each ally. More significantly, the analysis will also show the balance of payments cost of each country with forces stationed in West Germany, Italy, Greece, Turkey and elsewhere around the Mediterranean.

This study is likely to show that West Germany, Italy, Greece and Turkey "benefit" from stationed, mainly American forces on their soil both because of the contributions — or savings — these forces bring to the countries' defence efforts and because of the foreign currency the troops spend in the countries.

Britain, Belgium, The Netherlands and Canada — along with the Americans — "lose out," meanwhile, because of the additional cost of stationing troops in West Germany.

Germany is already trying to persuade its European allies to contribute more cash to NATO's collective defence effort so as to reduce America's costs. Britain, Canada, Belgium and The Netherlands, however, argue that they are already paying more than their "fair share" as a result of their own military presence on the Rhine.

Bonn is trying to place the problem in the context of U.S.-European relations as a whole, against the background of the American declaration of "Year of Europe."

The British view was summed up by one official as: "we are not ready to pay twice over" (for American troops, as well as for British troops, in West Germany).

Meanwhile, Bonn is faced with an American demand for $3.3 billion over a two-year period, to offset the foreign exchange cost of maintaining U.S. troops in central Europe. This is $1.3 billion more than the sum agreed between the two sides for the previous offset pact which expired during the summer.

50 years behind the times.

CANADA TAGGED 'EXPLOITER'

KIRKLAND LAKE, Ont. (CP) — Rt. Rev. Bruce McLeod, moderator of the United Church of Canada, says Canadians are seen as exploiters by developing countries of the Third World.

Dr. McLeod, on a 10-city swing through Northern Ontario, told a meeting of several service clubs Tuesday that Canadians are considered to be "simply out to get rich like Americans," and not as generous and peace-loving as many Canadians believe.

Canadian corporations are guilty of international economic exploitation, he said, particularly in Latin American and Carribean countries.

He said Canadian-controlled sugar operation in Recife, Brazil, forces peasants to grow sugar under threat of imprisonment and torture. They are now allowed to grow their own food on the farms.

Canada plays a central role in perpetuating poverty in many such countries, Dr. McLeod said. In 1971 a Canadian-made tractor was sold in Jamaica for the equivalent of 680 tons of sugar, but today the same tractor costs the equivalent of 3,500 tons.

While most of the world's population suffered from hunger last year, Canadians used 50,000 tons of tuna for pet food, he said, adding an admission that he has three dogs.

'Just Killed Stool Pigeon' Court Told

A Victoria man on trial for the March stabbing death of Wallace Omar Stevenson, told another man, "I just killed myself a stool pigeon," a witness testified in B.C. Supreme Court Tuesday.

John Murphy, the manager of an alcoholics' boarding house at 132 Dallas, testified he met Royden Gaylord "Sonny" Morrison, 42, in the hallway of the house on Dallas late in the afternoon of March 14.

"He said 'I just killed myself a stool pigeon,' and then gave me a knife and told me he had washed it off," Murphy said.

"I wiped the knife on my shirt and then gave it back to him."

Murphy said he wiped the knife on his shirt so his fingerprints would not show up on it. "I didn't want to be involved."

In earlier testimony before Mr. Justice Alan Macfarlane, Murphy said a drinking party had been held in the house every day for at least one month before the fatal stabbing.

The day of the stabbing, Murphy said, he, his wife and Don Graham, another resident of the house, had gone downtown in the afternoon to buy groceries. They came back, deposited the groceries upstairs in the freezer and Murphy started to plaster the stairwell wall. A short time later, Graham came upstairs and told Murphy something which made him go downstairs.

"I walked into the dining room and I saw Wally (Stevenson) sloughed in the chair. I felt for his pulse, but I couldn't feel it but I was kind of shaken up," Murphy said.

Murphy then ran upstairs and asked his wife to phone the police and an ambulance. On his way back downstairs he met Morrison, also a resident of the house, in the hallway.

Murphy testified that the knife Morrison handed him was one that he (Morrison) used for wood carving.

"My wife and I and Sonny were in the dining room. I told Sonny to go to bed and then I pushed him. My wife said that Wally was dead and Sonny said "He's nothing but a stool pigeon anyway," Murphy said.

A stool pigeon, Murphy said, is a person who goes to the police about "something."

Both Stevenson and Morrison had been getting "stone drunk" on either wine or vanilla extract for about a month before the stabbing, Murphy said. All the men in the house got along when they were sober, Murphy said, but when they were drunk, they often fought, brawled and quarrelled.

He testified Morrison appeared drunk and looked "as if he were high on drugs" the day of the stabbing. "He had a very dazed look."

Graham, the cook at 132 Dallas, testified he was preparing supper in the kitchen later in the afternoon of March 14 when Morrison came into the kitchen and said: "I just stabbed a man. Can I wash my knife in your sink?" Graham said he "took off like a rabbit," after that request because, "I didn't want anything to do with it."

"I went to the dining room about 10 minutes later and I saw Wally slumped over the chair and I saw blood on his shirt front," Graham said.

In previous testimony, a doctor said the fatal wound was caused by a sharp instrument and was about one inch wide and three inches deep. The knife in question had a blade half an inch wide and 2½ inches long.

N.J. Trial Links Records, Drugs

NEWARK, N.J. (UPI) — The government's star witness in a heroin smuggling case Tuesday told how a woman defendant carried cash and drugs strapped to her waist across the U.S.-Canada border — a case involving charges that the underworld used a billion-dollar drug racket to push various song recordings on the air.

The witness, Anthony Del Vecchio, 25, earlier pleaded guilty to one count of a 26-count indictment returned last February against him and seven others.

Del Vecchio was identified by government prosecutors as an errand boy for defendant Pasquale Falcone, 41. He testified that he got telephone calls at Falcone's New Jersey apartment, and that he met various other defendants at restaurants and a pizzeria in New York City and Montreal.

Del Vecchio said Falcone told him that defendant Wally Berger would travel to Montreal with $75,000 strapped to her waist and would return home with the drugs hidden in the same place.

"No matter how big or how small, she would bring it back," the witness told the eight-woman, four-man jury.

Standing trial are five of eight persons indicted last Feb. 6 on charges of conspiracy to manufacture, distribute, dispense and possess heroin brought into the United States from Canada.

They are Pasquale Falcone, Frank Dasti, Spiro Venduras and sisters Wally and Francine Berger.

Francine Berger was identified as a former receptionist at Columbia Records; Falcone as an agent for various theatrical and music artists and as a member of the reputed crime family of Vito Genovese, and Dastri, Arrested last December, as a high-ranking underworld figure in Montreal.

U.S. Aid Slashed

WASHINGTON (WP) — A $1.2 billion foreign economic aid bill, the smallest since worldwide aid began a quarter century ago, passed the Senate on a 54 to 42 roll-call vote Tuesday, after critics slashed $250 million from the measure and failed by only a single vote to cut out another $134 million.

The authorization bill was piloted to final approval by Sen. Hubert Humphrey (D—Min.), who said the aid program is still urgently needed to help economic development in the world's poorest countries, some with gross national below $100 a year per person.

However, the program was sharply criticized by Sens. J. W. Fulbright (D — Ark.), Frank Church (D — Idaho), Harry Flood Byrd (Ind.-Va.), and others as providing excessive outlays at a time when the United States is under the gravest economic pressure.

Fulbright also repeated his criticism of the bilateral (country-to-country) method of giving aid, which he has repeatedly called a cold war relic.

Test Drive Was Too Long

RICHMOND HILL, Ont. — A British Columbia mechanic, who said he decided to give a friend's motorcycle a road test, was placed on probation for two years after pleading guilty Tuesday to possession of stolen property.

Scott Boyer, 20, of Cultus Lake, testified he took the $1,800 machine which he was servicing for a friend out for a test run and "on impulse" kept going.

Provincial Judge Russell Pearse also ordered Boyer to pay $400 towards the cost of returning the motorcycle to its rightful owner.

Boyer was arrested by police here Saturday, six weeks and about 4,000 miles after setting out.

WASHINGTON — Elliot Roosevelt, son of President Franklin Roosevelt, today "completely and categorically" denied charges that he offered a convicted securities swindler $100,000 to assassinate the prime minister of the Bahamas.

Roosevelt, in written testimony to be given to the permanent investigations subcommittee, also called testimony accusing him of involvement in stolen securities transactions "vicious lies" and said the two men who made the allegations before the subcommittee had perjured themselves.

NEW YORK — Walter Lippmann, 84, the dean of American journalism who twice won the Pulitzer Prize, suffered a stroke at his home and was rushed to a hospital. He was in critical condition today at New York Hospital.

Lippman had a seizure at his residence at New York's Hotel Lowell. Doctors said he had had a "cerebral-vascular accident," a stroke.

BOULDER, Colo. — A businessman who told his nephew to cheat to win the 1973 National Soapbox Derby will not have to go to jail.

Juvenile court Judge Horace Holmes said Tuesday he had agreed to a defence motion for a "non-judicial adjustment" against Robert Lange Sr. The adjustment would bar any jail sentence for Lange.

OTTAWA — The Supreme Court of Canada has given permission to Jean Jacques Saulnier, suspended Montreal police chief, to appeal the findings of a Quebec Police Commission inquiry which judged him incompetent.

. . . But He Flunked All Modesty Tests

TUNIS (UPI) — President Habib Bourguiba says he is prepared to teach a course about himself and would point out that he is a political genius, probably a great poet and may live to be 100.

He made the remarks in an address to writers who took part in a poetry contest which marked his 70th birthday last August. Tunisian newspapers printed the text of his address Tuesday.

Bourguiba, the architect of Tunisian independence who is often referred to in local newspapers as "the supreme warrior," said he was prepared to spend an hour a week teaching the history of Tunisian nationalism and his role in it.

By this means he could "present he who has forged history, created the new Tunisia out of nothing . . . made of it a nation respected by its former occupier (France) which hosted him in Paris.

"The vicissitudes of my life are a rare example in the history of the world," he said.

Bourguiba went on: "I must reveal to you as well as to the people another aspect of the personality of Bourguiba.

"Not only is he a man of political genius who has triumphed over French colonialism, but he is also perhaps a great poet."

"I will meet you again in 1983 for my 80th birthday," he told the writers, "then for my 90th birthday and then — why not? — for my 100th birthday.

"When I have been called to god, these oratorical meetings will take on an elegiac tone to weep for the great man that I have been."

Celebrities' Beastly Guest Was Rabid

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Henry Fonda and James Stewart are among the celebrities who may have been exposed to rabid raccoons at a society "Beastly Ball" held Sept. 21 to raise money for the zoo, county health authorities said Tuesday.

Officials said they were asking the ball's organizers to canvass the guest list to find out whether any of the 300 or so who attended were bitten or scratched by the animals.

"The odds are that they are not in any kind of danger, but we can't take chances," said Dr. Ichiro Kamei, chief of the county communicable diseases control centre.

A county veterinarian said one of the three raccoons at the ball later was found to be rabid, apparently because it was given faulty anti-rabies vaccine, and has been destroyed. The other two animals are in quarantine.

'IT ALL STARTED WITH LIE TO MOTHER'

FLORENCE, Italy (AP) — A doctor's son who worked as a physician in a hospital for 20 years and became the mayor in his home town today drew a jail term of 26 months for being a fake.

"It all started with a lie to mother," Mario Biscioni told the court.

Biscioni, 47, from nearby Pescia, was convicted of illegally practising the medical profession and illegally accepting the office of head doctor in a state-run hospital.

The son of an obstetrician who died when he was 10 years old, Biscioni studied at three universities, in Milan, Florence and Pisa and entered as a training doctor the Pescia Hospital. He joined Italy's Christian Democrat party and became mayor of Pescia in 1970.

Two years later, a hospital employee reading through the National Guild of Doctors saw Biscioni's name was missing, and a check at the hospital showed there was no evidence he ever had graduated.

Doctors at the Pescia Hospital said Biscioni always sought someone else's advice or help in making prescriptions or operating on broken bones in the orthopedic department he headed.

Biscioni, working as a salesman of medical devices while his sentence is appealed, said "I want to earn money for my 18-year-old son."

"He may take up medicine at the university and maybe I will do the same. We may study together and both become real doctors."

Evening Wear for Cars?

PARIS (AP) — Oleg Cassini, who has dressed some of the world's most glamorous women and now is also an automotive designer, said Tuesday he thinks cars should be clad for day and evening just like their owners.

"I would like to see a special package offer of two mechanically identical cars, one dressed for informal day use and the other in glamorous hues and materials for formal occasions," the French-born designer said.

"The stage is set, in the United States at least, for this romantic concept," Cassini said.

The stylist was in Paris for the introduction to Europe of the American Motors Cassini Matador line he designed. It will be shown at the Paris auto show opening Thursday.

After having interior styling created by Gucci, Pierre Cardin and Levis in the last three years, American Motors selected Cassini to take the concept further and play a large role in exterior styling as well.

"With many two-car families and a move to informal daytime fashion in the United States," Cassini said, "there is a growing clash between people's cars and clothes."

"I see the day car in bright colors and with perhaps leather and tweeds in the trim. The night car would have dressier hues, and richer trims in velvets and satins," Cassini said.

There are no firm plans for the project, but Cassini has been retained as a design consultant for American Motors for the next two to three years.

"Ideally, I would like to design a car as I design for women — strip it naked and then clothe it from the ground up," Cassini said.

Celebration Dinner Slated

BIRMINGHAM, England (UPI) — About 100 engineers, drainage experts, public works officials and workmen will sit down to lunch next week in a sewer.

They'll dine on roast meat, fresh salmon and fruit salad to commemorate the opening of a sewer 30 feet underground. "We got the idea after finding that a celebration party was held in the old sewer which was built 70 years ago," said Albert Philips, secretary of the company which built the sewer.

Canada Turns Corner On Peaceful A-Use

By JEFF CARRUTHERS
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The peaceful uses of the atom have taken an important step forward in Canada this week.

The Atomic Energy Control Board, the federal agency which regulates the use of nuclear energy in Canada, has finally given the go-ahead for the use of nuclear-powered heart pacemakers in Canada.

The nuclear pacemakers, powered by a small sliver of radio-active plutonium 238 instead of conventional chemical batteries, promise to last two to three times as long as the standard battery powered pacemakers.

This means a heart patient requiring one of the devices to keep his heart beating properly will only need surgery to replace the device every five to 10 years, instead of two or three years as is now the case.

The go-ahead applies to the Model 9000 distributed by Medtronic of Canada Ltd. of Toronto. Each of the devices will sell in Canada for about $5,000, a company official said Tuesday.

The first surgical implant of a nuclear-powered pacemaker will probably take place within a few weeks, according to Dr. P. G. Hurst, president of the AECB.

And Medtronic says a number of leading heart surgery teams in Toronto and Montreal are already vying for the honor of making Canadian history with the first implant of a nuclear pacemaker.

But Canada is three years behind the leaders in the field of nuclear pacemakers. It all started in 1970, with the first implant taking place in France.

Since then, more than 300 patients are now using nuclear pacemakers, including about 80 patients in the United States.

Initially, the AECB is limiting the number of patients in Canada who will be able to get the nuclear pacemakers.

Dr. Hurst said Tuesday that he expects about 15 will be permitted during the first months and that federal nuclear and health authorities will then keep a close watch on the results.

In addition to requests from Toronto and Montreal Hospitals, the AECB and Medtronic have already received requests from surgeons in Winnipeg, Vancouver and Halifax to implant the nuclear devices in patients.

The typical pacemaker is about the size of a small cigarette package, is implanted under the patient's skin, and is powered by small chemical batteries which last about two or three years.

The device regularly sends sufficient spurts of electricity to the heart via special electrodes attached to the heart muscle. The small electrical pulses artificially trigger the heart to pump.

PACEMAKER WRAPPED IN RED TAPE

OTTAWA (CP) — Getting a nuclear-powered pacemaker in Canada will likely be a thrill and a convenience for a patient who needs the device to keep his heart beating at the right rhythm.

But it will also involve a lot of red tape. For in many respects, such a patient will be a walking nuclear installation.

And the Atomic Energy Control Board, in authorizing Tuesday the use of such devices in Canada on a limited basis, has taken steps to control their use and limit any health problems associated with the grain of highly-radioactive plutonium 238 that powers them.

He will have to keep the government informed every time he wants to visit a foreign country. In some instances, he may require an import and export permit for nuclear material and devices.

He will have to sign a consent form, so that the device can be quickly removed surgically in case of death.

He will have to wear a special medical alert bracelet, so that other people wil know he has a nuclear pacemaker inside his chest.

But there's one important thing he won't have to do. And that's go in for surgery every two or three years to have the pacemaker removed so the batteries can be changed.

The nuclear batteries will last from five to 10 years between changes.

But then that's atomic power for you: a lot of red tape, for safety's sake, along with the advantages.

Police-Fire Merger Liked

Amalgamation of urban fire and police departments under the Capital Regional District should be seriously considered, board chairman Jim Campbell said today.

"I am not advocating taking over fire and police immediately," he said, but "I think it is an appropriate future regional function."

Asked about the role of the RCMP, Campbell said he visualized amalgamated municipal forces in the urban areas including Langford-Colwood, leaving the outer areas with the RCMP.

"I see regionalization of fire and police services on a precinct basis. It would be important that the constabulary remains local. Under no circumstances should we superimpose a giant force without any roots in the community it serves," he said.

Plane Hunt Zeroes On Heavy Woods

The search for Neil Carey, 46, of North Vancouver, missing on a flight from Quesnel to Prince Rupert, is being concentrated in a heavily wooded area about 50 miles south of Prince George, rescue officials said today.

The search, now in its 15th day, has completely covered twice the area where officials feel it is most probable Carey's light plane went missing.

A spokesman said a triangular area between Prince George, Quesnel and Bobtail Mountain, south of Vanderhoof, will be "saturated" with search aircraft over the next few days.

The advent of fall is improving search conditions in the heavily deciduous forest zones.

Five military and six or seven civilian aircraft will join the search today. The last of three helicopters on loan from Edmonton will leave the search tonight, the spokesman said.

Reconsider Islands, Campbell Asks MLAs

All 55 members of the legislature have been asked to urge the provincial government to refer the Gulf Islands report back to the legislature's municipal committee.

The request was made by Capital Regional District board chairman Jim Campbell, who has been critical of the report which recommends setting up a separate trust or commission to administer the islands.

Campbell, who lives on Saturna Island and represents the Outer Gulf Islands on the regional board, hoped that the committee "will attempt to find a solution within the framework of the existing government structures."

He complained that residents of the Gulf Islands will become "in a sense wards of the commission or trust" and the main method of community self-expression would be denied them.

TORONTO TEACHERS HALT EXTRA WORK

TORONTO (CP) — All Metro Toronto's 8,000 high school teachers have stopped supervising extra-curricular activities.

James Forster, vice-president of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers Federation (OSSTF), said Tuesday night the teachers would start work at 8:30 a.m. and stop 15 minutes after their last class of the day, beginning today.

By Oct. 22 the approach will be a complete work-to-rule campaign.

The plan, adopted Tuesday at a closed meeting of representatives of all Metro high schools, is to protest 1974 budget priorities of the Metro school board, said Forster.

$1,000 FINE

PORT ALBERNI — A Port Alberni man was fined $1,000 and prohibited from driving for two years after he was found guilty of dangerous driving and failing to remain at the scene of an accident.

Hans Peter Danneberg, 29, was charged originally with criminal negligence in the July 21 death of Gwendolyn Falkenberg, 14.

Death Ruled Accident

The death of a 24-year-old Sidney man Saturday was accidental with no blame attached, district coroner Gordon Gerrie said Tuesday after conducting an inquiry.

Peter Maude of 2040 Whitebirch, a passenger in a car driven by his stepbrother Joseph Iverson, 18, of Verdier Avenue, Brentwood Bay, was killed instantly when thrown out of the car after it hit the centre divider near Wains intersection.

Neither Iverson nor a girl hitchhiker who was getting a lift to the B.C. Ferries were injured.

Pick-a-Back Promoters Target

A charitable appeals review board is essential to weed out unscrupulous promoters who ride on the backs of charities, Saanich's finance committee was told Tuesday.

Asking support for such a board on a regional basis, Garth Homer, executive director of the Community Council of Greater Victoria, told the committee:

"At the outset it should be stated that the recommendation that a charitable appeals review board be formed is not meant to be a criticism of any particular charitable organization or service club that has conducted appeals to the public for funds to assist non-profit organizations.

"However, some practices are being introduced into the capital regional district which experience in other parts of Canada has shown to be undesirable."

Homer said Vancouver city council had changed its trades licence bylaw in 1972 in order to have the power to refuse licences where the promotion was getting too high a cut of the take.

"Licence applications (in Vancouver)," Homer said, "showed these returns ranged upwards to as much as 80 per cent of the gross before expenses. Before the introduction of the bylaw it was understood that charitable organizations, for whom drives had been conducted, had been known to receive as little as eight per cent of the monies collected, while the promoters — usually from out of town — retained upwards of $100,000."

He warned, "as more charitable appeal review boards are established across Canada, concern is being expressed that promoters will gravitate to those cities and municipalities where no such regulations exist."

The committee will recommend to council that a board be established on a regional basis and that Saanich pay its share of the $1,500 estimated to run such a board for a year.

Mayor Hugh Curtis told the committee the Capital Regional District had "adopted a new concept of having a social planning division and this could well be a function of that division."

Homer assured the committee:

"Such a review board is not intended to discourage fund-raising drives by church organizations, sports groups or schools nor will it limit the activities of service clubs or those agencies conducting major appeals.

"Rather, by ensuring that there is accountability for the funds raised, the credibility of their appeals will be enhanced in the eyes of the general public."

GAS STATION OPERATOR PULLS PLUG

COSTA MESA, Calif. (UPI) — "I can take so much — then I go berserk," said Bob Smith after it was all over and the oil company executives and police had left.

The appearance of the big gasoline tanker from the Arco oil company in Smith's service station was, by his standards "so much."

So was the bill for 8,800 gallons of gasoline. It was $130.65 higher than Smith had paid for the previous load.

The old car rolled up behind the big tanker. The pickup truck pulled to a stop across its path. Smith pulled the sparkplugs from the truck and began draining the oil.

"Are you planning on trying to keep me here?" asked Arco driver Lou Henry.

"No," Smith blithely replied. "I just have work to do. You can leave if you want."

He didn't bother belaboring the obvious. If Henry wanted to take his truck along when he left, Henry would have to drive over the pickup truck on which Smith was working.

Arco distributor Jacob Staub called police. Smith explained to the officers that he was just doing a little work on his pickup, and would certainly move it when he was through.

No law has been broken, the officers told the Arco men.

It was after 8 p.m., more than five hours since Henry had wheeled the tanker into Smith's station, when Smith gave the Arco men a big grin.

Just Little Scraps of Clues Keep Fred Busy

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

Const. Fred Beard of the Victoria City Police gets a lot of "no-hope" cases to work on.

There is no real evidence, no eye witnesses, only a piece or two of broken glass or maybe a bit of paint. But that's enough to give Beard and fellow officers a 60 per cent success rate in catching up with hit-and-run drivers.

Beard is a one-man branch of the police traffic division and investigates between 50 and 60 hit-and-run accidents every month.

Some of the cases are solved by the original investigating officer, but about 50 per cent of them, the "no-hope" ones, are turned over to Beard.

With only a piece of chrome or a flake of paint, Beard tracks down the offending driver and solves the case.

Some cases are solved in a matter of minutes, before the victim of the hit-and-run driver even knows his car has been damaged — others take weeks or months.

About 85 per cent of the cases Beard has involve unattended, parked cars which are hit by another car.

The others can involve, a person in the parked car, a pedestrian, bicycles or two car accidents in which one ver.

Like any policeman, Beard has his share of amazing stories about his job, like the time he followed a trail of burning rubber for more than five miles and finally caught up with the culprit. The tire of the offending vehicle had been scraped in the accident and flapped on the pavement all the way home.

BEARD
. . . 'no-hope' cases

Beard also tells about the time he investigated a "no-hope" case where the only piece of evidence was the V8 engine emblem which had fallen off the hit-and-run car. Beard identified the emblem as one off the left front fender of white Chevrolet, but no more evidence was forthcoming.

He stopped the car and the driver admitted being in the hit-and-run accident months earlier.

"I don't really know how I notice these things, but there has to be something odd about a car. Nobdoy notices an undamaged vehicle, but it just clicks if there is something strange about a car," Beard said.

The owner of the station wagon apparently hadn't washed his car for sometime, because the offending truck left its licence number imprinted in the dirt on the front of the car.

At other accidents, Beard has picked up the licence plates of the hit-and-run vehicle.

But the easy ones are in the minority.

Most hit-and-runs are solved by painstaking work on the part of Beard and other members of the police force.

Eyewitnesses are great. They take down licence numbers and the color and make of the car and it gives Beard a start.

Young men between the ages of 17 and 25 are the most reliable witnesses when it comes to the makes of cars, Beard said.

"They can usually rhyme off the make, year, manufacturer's color name and the sub-model series of the car.

"After that, older men are pretty good at identifying cars and older people and females and not quite so good." Beard said.

Even with only one letter and one number, from a licence plate, Beard can often discern just who the car belongs to, but this requires hand-searching through the files at the motor-vehicle branch.

"I guess the most important thing in these types of cases is the co-operation from the public, and we get great co-operation.

"The public gets involved. I guess they dislike hit-and-run drivers because it has happened to them or to one of their friends.

"A hit-and-run driver seems to get their dander up and they either phone us or at least leave any information they have under the windshield wiper of a damaged car."

When Beard solves a case and takes the name and licence number of the offending car to the victim, he always gives that victim a word of advice.

"I tell them all that someone has helped them in solving their problem and that the next time they are witness to a hit-and-run or other accident, they had better help out the next guy — kind of a reciprocal arrangement."

Most hit-and-run drivers, when confronted with their crime, readily admit it, Beard said.

"They don't volunteer themselves to us if it was their car involved, and they weren't driving it at the time of the accident, but they usually seem relieved when we come to see them — they lose a couple of night's sleep over it."

Drivers leave the scene of the accident for several reasons, Beard said. The majority of them leave because they are either impaired, are driving without insurance or without a licence and want to escape criminal action.

Others leave because they either panic or they really don't have any respect for other people's property.

"We do a lot of work on these things, but still the public is our best source of information — without their co-operation we wouldn't be getting anywhere," Beard said.

"All people need to do is call us and tell us what they saw, and we'll take it from there."

She Signed Piece of Paper

An article in Saturday's paper about Peter Murray de Goutiere, sentenced to 10 months in jail for uttering forged cheques was incorrect in stating Mr. Anna Hamm, 76, of Suite 204, 885 Craigflower, had signed a blank cheque.

What she signed was a slip of paper she believed was a work slip required by three young men who entered her apartment posing as telephone men. While they were there, a cheque book was stolen.

Canadian Freed From U.S. Jail

BURLINGTON, Vt. (AP) — Gavin Naeve, 23, a naturalized Canadian citizen, pleaded not guilty Tuesday to a six-year-old United States charge that he failed to register for the draft.

Naeve and his family moved from the Brattleboro, Vt., area to a farmi n North Hatley, Que., in 1967, when he was 10 days away from his 18th birthday and selective service registration.

He was indicted by a federal grand jury in Vermont in 1967, on the draft evasion charge.

Naeve, who became a Canadian citizen in 1971, was arrested 10 days ago in New York City during a stopover between airline flights.

His family said they did not learn of the arrest until a sister received Haeve's personal belongings from New York's West Street jail.

They also said they did not learn he was lodged in the Chittenden Country Correctional Centre here until Monday, despite efforts by three lawyers to locate him.

The director of the American Civil Liberties Union in Vermont, David Harrison, said the organization was looking into the matter to determine whether Naeve's civil rights have been violated in any way.

Under U.S. law, Naeve can be prosecuted on the 1967 charge, despite the fact that the draft ended in the United States last year.

Lowell Naeve, the young man's father, was a conscientious objector during the Second World War and spent four years in U.S. detention centres. He later wrote two books about his experience.

SURVIVOR DIES

HONOLULU (AP) — James Fisher, who survived 72 days adrift in the Pacific, died Tuesday.

Fisher, 26, of Moses Lake, Wash., died of a kidney infection and complications. His kidneys stopped functioning last Friday, and he had been receiving kidney machine treatments since then.

Fisher lost 100 pounds during the ordeal and was weak and dazed when he arrived in Honolulu.

Polar Bear Pact In Final Stages

OTTAWA (CP) — Five countries, including Canada, are negotiating an agreement to protect the endangered polar bear.

Now in final drafting stages, the agreement is expected to be signed next month in Norway by representatives of Canada, Norway, Denmark, the Soviet Union and the U.S.

The only countries with polar bear populations, they have been negotiating the agreement for several years.

The agreement is expected to lean heavily on co-operative management techniques and related matters such as the preservation of denning habitats.

Sources say it won't bring an end to polar bear hunting, but each country has agreed to stop hunting the huge mammals on Arctic ice fields that run out beyond their territorial limits.

However, it is not clear yet how far territorial jurisdiction will extend for all countries. Canada claims a 100-mile offshore limit for Artic pollution control. Distances vary in the other countries. A compromise is expected when the parties meet for the final negotiating session in November.

About 500 polar bears are killed annually in Canada under a quota system administered by the Northwest Territories government.

Some countries, including the Soviet Union, urged a total hunting ban, but Canada refused, arguing that its hunt is well-controlled and does not threaten the bear's survival.

It also refused to abolish the traditional hunting rights of natives.

KIRK PROTESTS ON GREENPEACE

WELLINGTON (AP) — New Zealand Prime Minister Norman Kirk announced today his government has protested to France over the seizure of the Canadian nuclear protest yacht Greenpeace III near Mururoa Atoll Aug. 15.

Kirk said two New Zealand female crew members had made sworn statements on the incident. At the New Zealand government's invitation, French Ambassador Christian de Nicolay also had provided a report of the incident.

Kirk said there is some conflict of evidence as to exactly what happened at the time of the boarding of the vessel. But there appeared to be no dispute that the incident occurred on the high seas, outside the 12-mile limit, that force was employed by boarding party, and that the yacht's crew was taken against their will to French territory.

Rail Talks Resume

MONTREAL (CP) — Mediation talks between Canada's two largest railways and representatives of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers resumed here Tuesday, a CP Rail spokesman said.

The spokesman said federal mediator M. K. Carson met Tuesday with CP Rail negotiators and union representatives and is scheduled to meet today with the union and CNR negotiators.

The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, which represents 4,600 CP Rail and CNR employees, is seeking a two-year contract.

The two sides applied for mediation in May and talks have continued on and off since then, the spokesman said.

Currently under discussion are working conditions.

Contracts between the union and the two railways expired in the spring. Details of union demands presented in January were not available.

DIRTY DEEDS ABOARD SKYLAB

HOUSTON (UPI) — The Skylab 2 astronauts said Tuesday they had several spats aboard their earth orbiting station, and one of the spacemen said he was too busy to take a shower the entire two months.

But they said they had no psychological problems during man's longest space voyage.

"By the time the end of the mission came around, I think we all felt as though we could have just stayed their indefinitely," said Jack Lousma, who with Alan Bean and Owen Garriott held their first news conference since they returned to earth Sept. 25.

"I noticed in our 60 days a couple of times we tended to get a little bit sharp with one another," said mission commander Bean.

"It would kind of build up over three or four days. It would always reach a climax where we would fuss with each other a little bit and then that would be the end of it.

"It was almost like a family argument . . . it was nothing of significance. When you're working with guys 18 hours a day, you're bound to rub one another from time to time," Bean said.

Garriott said there were so many chores aboard the 118-foot space station that he never took time for a shower.

He took only spongebaths. Lousma took one shower and Bean took two.

"I must admit that I was the only one of the three who never took a shower in two months," Garriott said.

"I begrudged the hour and a half it took to set up the apparatus, take the shower and take it apart again. It turned out in the workshop that there was nothing that was dirty, so there wasn't much need to get cleaned up. And the atmosphere was very dry so you didn't sweat very much. So we did most of our cleaning just with the washrags."

Lousma said he thought the crewmen got along remarkably well and were aware of the others' feelings and carefully avoided conflicts.

Bean said he spent free hours thinking about his family or "just daydreaming about things I missed most on earth and relating those to what I thought I would miss most." He said he didn't miss spaghetti as much as he thought he would.

The astronauts said they all are in good physical condition.

"I feel a little bit like the ad says, a little tired blood," said Bean. "I think we all feel better than we thought we would when we launched."

Big-Game Catch Up

Catches of most big-game species in the Interior are up substantially over last year, the department of Recreation and Conservation said Tuesday.

Figures compiled at the Cache Creek, B.C. checking station show 727 moose shot up to Sept. 30 this year, compared with 572 for the same part of the hunting season last year.

Number of deer killed is up more than 35 per cent to 112 and mountain sheep counted at the station — at the junction of the Trans-Canada Highway and Highway 97 — is up eight to 26. The black bear kill is up a third to 82.

Sister Jacqueline Aubuchon in class at The Warehouse School

Education on a Shoestring

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

The Warehouse School, a small two-teacher project at 508 Alpha, is heading into its second year with a shoestring budget.

In fact, the school has no financing at all except for money saved from last year's Local Initiative Project (LIP) grant and tuition paid by the department of human resources.

★ ★ ★

The two sisters of St. Ann live in a group residence and are supported by other members of the group.

The Warehouse School opened in July 1972 for people who need special help in their education which can't be met in regular classrooms. A total of 35 attended last year.

Dropouts, flunkouts, unwed mothers, ex-convicts, single parents, unemployed adults and people withdrawing from alcohol or drugs have been part of the school in the past year.

★ ★ ★

Up to now they've paid no fees, although the department of human resources has paid tuition for those students on welfare.

If the two sisters don't get another LIP grant, they may have to charge a fee.

"If we don't get a grant we'll ask them to give whatever they can give," said Sister Jacqueline.

No financial assistance has been received from local school boards or the department of education.

The 10 students now attending work around one big table in the large room on the second floor of the Alpha St. warehouse that houses the school.

The atmosphere is casual. Interaction between the students is an important part of the learning process, said Sister Jacqueline.

All learning at the school is individualized, she said. Each student tackles what he thinks he can handle, goes at his own pace, and gets individual tutoring.

★ ★ ★

Each student makes a contract to do a certain amount of work each week and it's up to him, not the teacher, to see he does it.

"We try to keep them realistic," said Sister Charlotte. "Some come in thinking they can do Grade 11 and 12 in two months."

The school is open three and a half days a week, until Thursday noon, which is as long as the students want to attend each week.

★ ★ ★

Some students are preparing to write the provincial government's high school equivalency tests, which will give them the equivalent of high school graduation.

One 35-year-old man is learning to read. Others are doing some catching up so they can go back into the regular school system.

A young girl who had dropped out of the school system finished her Grade 12 at the Warehouse School last spring and is now in university.

Her father was so grateful he has pledged to give the school $100 a year for the next five years.

What's in a Name? Plenty

By NANCY WARD

LONDON (FWF) — "Sticks and stones may break my bones but names will never hurt me," is a tried and true old adage that has recently been proved very wrong indeed.

Names, according to a pair of psychiatrists in San Diego, Calif., can hurt you very much indeed. They found that children whose parents had lumbered them with names like Marmaduke, Cyril or Claud were emotionally handicapped and had a rough ride in school because of their unfortunate names.

Boys with odd names had a worse time of it than girls. They tended to be teased and taunted more by classmates and often became belligerent, aggressive and antagonistic towards their teachers.

The odd thing that the psychologists discovered in the course of their work on names was that many such boys had good cause to dislike their teachers because they were unfairly treated by them. Teachers very often subconsciously regarded children with way-out and ridiculous names as born losers and frequently awarded them lower marks than kids with ordinary names.

The two psychologists, Herbert Harari of California State University and Dr. John McDavid of Miami University conducted the following experiment in a study involving 80 teachers.

'A child's name can mean the difference between confidence and uncertainty'

They took four essays written by nine-year-old boys and asked alternate groups of teachers to mark them. When the first group saw the essays they were signed by lads with popular names like David, Mark or John. The same work, this time with unacceptable names like Cyril or Algernon was shown to other teachers. Though the work was identical, the Cyril-Algernon group received much lower marks.

So parents who want to saddle their helpless infants, not yet equipped to complain, with outlandish names, have now been warned of the unfortunate consequences of such eccentric titles.

Harari says in his report that he is now certain that a schoolboy's name clearly affects his teacher's opinion of him, even though the teacher is not consciously aware of the discrimination.

So, what's in a name? Very often it can mean the difference between confidence or uncertainty, success or failure. "When you expect the Marmadukes of this world to be losers and treat them as though they are bottom of the pile, then, too often, they become losers," says the professor.

It has been proved many times that children respond to their teachers' expectation of them. If a teacher decides that a child is only capable of work in a lower stream, the child often accepts the situation and it never occurs to him that he can aspire higher.

It is pretty horrifying to realize that many bright children, burdened with ridiculous names, are being downgraded to the bottom end of classes simply because teacher thinks less of them, though he does not realize the fact, because of what they are called.

All this set me thinking about my own reaction to names. And it is, disgracefully I now realize, that I tend to stifle a snigger if I am introduced to someone called Cyril or Percival.

Many people, when they become adults, go to the trouble of changing unfortunate names by deed poll. However, according to the San Diego researchers, the damage has by then been well and truly done. So many school mates have sneered, so many teachers thought of them as twits that by then the thought that they are second class citizens can have undermined their confidence for ever.

BLUE COLLARS COOL

These are conclusions reached in a new study by Social Research, Inc. of Chicago, devoted primarily to the changing pattern of the working class woman's life. But along the way, the researchers looked into social changes affecting the next step in status, the so-called middle class.

"Women's Lib as a movement is . . . much more accepted by middle class women," says researcher Burleigh B. Gardner. "They accept its goals and are less sensitive to it as derogatory toward homemaking, probably because they have not been as completely subordinated to the homemaker's role."

Bytown Has Changed

elizabeth forbes

Those who remember Ottawa only in days when the railway station was opposite Chateau Laurier and a tunnel connected it with the hotel, would find that part of the national capital much changed now.

Of course, the Chateau still towers above the locks where the Rideau Canal meets the Ottawa River. Cruise boats still move up and down the five miles of the canal from city centre to Dow Lake.

Bytown Museum, on the canal below Confederation Square is still a major attraction for visitors. But there is a new railway station some miles out of the city and the old Union Station, across from Chateau Laurier, now renovated and renamed Confederation Centre, is used mainly as a site for federal-provincial conferences.

A spiral staircase to the right of the centre (almost a duplicate of the one connecting our Yates Street Parkade with Bastion Square) leads to a canal-side walk.

SIT AND REST

Today that lot is a place of green lawns and flower beds. A paved pathway has been added and a screening of trees protects the busiest corner from traffic noises.

In the shade of those trees benches and seats have been placed where people sit and rest while they watch the world go by.

The Ottawa skyline has changed too. And, as you move along those streets close to the Houses of Parliament you note that a few of the old landmarks are gone or are in process of going.

The Royal Canadian Mint, for instance, where you once could see coins being made, is vacant and forlorn since the mint was moved to Winnipeg.

What is to become of it? None of my Ottawa friends would hazard to guess.

The skyline now includes modern Place du Canada, the many-storeyed health and welfare building and out beyond city rall on its beautiful Green Island, the massive new headquarters for the department of external affairs (dedicated recently to the memory of the late Lester Pearson) all squares, angles and box-like projections piled one on top of the other.

WATERWAYS

During my recent visit, friends reminded me as they drove around the national capital, that waterways have always played a big part in the city's history.

Indeed, they insisted, without waterways, there likely would not have been a city.

The Rideau Canal system spans 125 miles between Kingston and Ottawa and can still be navigated from end to end by small pleasure craft. The Ottawa River is right at the city's front door.

Parks and driveways, planned and created by the National Capital Commission line those waterways.

Fifty miles of bicycle paths have been laid down in the parks. And on Sunday mornings, during summer and autumn, those parks and driveways are closed to motor traffic to allow Ottawans to stroll, bicycle, jog or walk their dogs along the waters edge.

This closed-to-motorists rule was the brain-child of Douglas Fullerton during the time he was head of the NCC.

It was also Fullerton who opened the canal for skating in winter. Changing rooms are set up at intervals, and my friends tell me that any bright Saturday or Sunday in the winter season thousands of skaters are on the canal. Lights are strung up along five miles of the waterway for night skating, too.

This same man had tobogan slides set up in certain areas of the parks for winter sport.

Because it is a national capital Ottawa is a place of diplomats, embassies, officials and civil servants.

It is also a place or history, of monuments and of people.

Monuments date back to the time of Samuel de Champlain, whose statue stands on Nepean Point(facing out to the Ottawa River he knew so well. Also to Lieut-Colonel John By who lived in the years 1779-1836 and who master-minded construction of the Rideau Canal.

History is centred on Parliament Hill. You find it in the main entrance to the Parliament Buildings, where arches join together as a symbol of Canada's federation of provinces "each giving and receiving support from one another."

In the carvings of a lion and unicorn at the main entrance. The lion holds a Union Jack with one paw and the British coat of arms in the other. The unicorn supports Canada's coat of arms and the fleur-de-lys of France.

In the Peace Tower's memorial chamber, dedicated to Canadian men, and women who gave their lives in the service of their country. There, in a gold and glass frame, is a book of Remembrance in which is listed the names of those men and women.

Pages are turned daily so that each is on view on the same day of the same month each year.

The people represent many countries, many languages and many cultures but they are all Ottawans, proud of their city, its scenery, and its history.

They point to the National Art Centre that in its planning stage was considered by many to be a white elephant. And, without exception, they now tell you proudly that it is one of Ottawa's jewels.

They urge you to visit the national art gallery, the archives and library. They insist that you see Laurier House (where Mackenzie King lived with the memories of his mother) and that you stand beside the Centennial Flame on Parliament Hill, symbol of Canada's hundredth birthday.

Macaroni and Mushrooms In a Ring of Fine Flavor

By HILDA BEASTALL

Imagine this Shell Ring in color on your Thanksgiving dinner table and then imagine the delicately fine flavors of the cooked ingredients. You won't be disappointed and your guests won't be looking around furtively for the meat course. A fresh fruit salad for dessert will be all that is wanted.

MACARONI SHELL RING WITH MUSHROOMS

12-ounce pkt. (3 c.) macaroni shells
3 large or 5 small eggs
1 c. water
½ c. powdered skim milk
1 tbsp wheat germ
1 tsp powdered brewers yeast
½ tsp salt
¼ tsp finely chopped mint
1 c. grated Cheddar cheese
1 tbsp finely chopped parsley or chervil

MUSHROOM FILLING OR SAUCE

2 c. coarsely chopped fresh mushrooms
¼ c. soft margarine
3 tbsp finely cut celery with leaves
3 tbsp chopped young horseradish leaves or young spinach leaves
1 tbsp finely cut parsley
¼ tsp salt
3 c. vegetable water (saved) or water with ½ c. powdered skim milk added
½ tsp vegemite or marmite
½ c. fine wholewheat bread crumbs
Diced red ripe tomatoes for topping.

The Shell Ring is baked early in the day, and reheated while you make the Mushroom Filling. The quantities serve 6 generously.

If you do not have a 9-inch ring mould, use a 7½-inch fluted mould — they hold the same quantity.

Cook the macaroni as directed on package, and drain. Beat eggs, add all other ingredients except parsley. Add to cooked macaroni and pour into well greased mould. Bake in moderate oven 350 degs. for about 45 minutes until set but not brown.

Mushroom Filling for Ring Mould (or we'll call it Sauce if served in a separate dish with a "solid" mould).

Melt margarine in heavy frypan; add chopped mushrooms and cook gently for 3 minutes. Add remaining three vegetables and the salt. Cook for three minutes longer.

Heat the 3 cups liquid, add the breadcrumbs and vegemite flavoring; then pour this into frypan with mushroom mixture and bring all to a gentle bubbling.

Pour into centre of Ring Mould, sprinkle with red ripe diced tomatoes. Or, serve as sauce in separate heated dish.

Hungry outdoor people may find space for a serving of warm Yeast Gingerbread (recipe given in Monday's column, Oct. 1) and crunchy sweet apples.

Not Fit for a Dog

DEAR ABBY: Our neighbors just returned from a two-week vacation and I hope they had a good time because now I need one.

They left their dog chained in the front yard! Another neighbor agreed to feed him daily, which was the only time the dog was quiet. The rest of the time he barked.

The first night, my husband got up at 4 a.m. to ask the owners to please take the dog inside, only to find there was no one home! The next day we found out the dog owners would be gone for two weeks! We nearly flipped.

Abby, if they couldn't find someone to keep the dog, they should have put it in a kennel.

They are home now, thank heavens, but what do you think of people who would keep the whole neighborhood up with a barking dog for two weeks?—Nerves On End.

DEAR NERVES: What happened to you shouldn't happen to a dog. And what happened to that dog shouldn't happen to a dog, either. You should have immediately notified your local humane society.

DEAR ABBY: I was disappointed in your reply to the girl who resented having a male physician give her a breast and pelvic examination. She said she wanted to remain chaste for her husband. You said an examination of that kind would in no way violate her chastity.

I disagree with you. I am no prude, but I place a high value on the privacy of my body, and I do not care to share it with anyone other than the man I marry. A male physician is no different from any other man, and I wonder how many husbands would allow their wives to go to a male gynecologist if they knew how intimately their wives would be touched and examined.

I have heard the argument that male doctors see hundreds of female patients a month, so a woman doesn't have to feel ashamed, but since when does frequency alone justify an action?

There is only one female physician in Terre Haute, and I go to her for my annual physical. I feel strongly that we women have a right to protect our intimacy; and should not be treated like children by male physicians.—P.J.

DEAR P.J.: It is indeed your right to select a female physician if you wish, but a male gynecolist has about as much erotic feeling while examining female patients as an electrician has when he's looking for a loose connection.

Bytown Has Changed

elizabeth forbes

Those who remember Ottawa only in days when the railway station was opposite Chateau Laurier and a tunnel connected it with the hotel, would find that part of the national capital much changed now.

Of course, the Chateau still towers above the locks where the Rideau Canal meets the Ottawa River. Cruise boats still move up and down the five miles of the canal from city centre to Dow Lake.

Bytown Museum, on the canal below Confederation Square is still a major attraction for visitors. But there is a new railway station some miles out of the city and the old Union Station, across from Chateau Laurier, now renovated and renamed Confederation Centre, is used mainly as a site for federal-provincial conferences.

A spiral staircase to the right of the centre (almost a duplicate of the one connecting our Yates Street Parkade with Bastion Square) leads to a canal-side walk.

SIT AND REST

Today that lot is a place of green lawns and flower beds. A paved pathway has been added and a screening of trees protects the busiest corner from traffic noises.

In the shade of those trees benches and seats have been placed where people sit and rest while they watch the world go by.

The Ottawa skyline has changed too. And, as you move along those streets close to the Houses of Parliament you note that a few of the old landmarks are gone or are in process of going.

The Royal Canadian Mint, for instance, where you once could see coins being made, is vacant and forlorn since the mint was moved to Winnipeg.

What is to become of it? None of my Ottawa friends would hazard to guess.

The skyline now includes modern Place du Canada, the many-storeyed health and welfare building and out beyond city hall on its beautiful Green Island, the massive new headquarters for the department of external affairs (dedicated recently to the memory of the late Lester Pearson) all squares, angles and box-like projections piled one on top of the other.

WATERWAYS

During my recent visit, friends reminded me as they drove around the national capital, that waterways have always played a big part in the city's history.

Indeed, they insisted, without waterways, there likely would not have been a city.

The Rideau Canal system spans 125 miles between Kingston and Ottawa and can still be navigated from end to end by small pleasure craft. The Ottawa River is right at the city's front door.

Parks and driveways, planned and created by the National Capital Commission line those waterways.

Fifty miles of bicycle paths have been laid down in the parks. And on Sunday mornings, during summer and autumn, those parks and driveways are closed to motor traffic to allow Ottawans to stroll, bicycle, jog or walk their dogs along the waters edge.

This closed-to-motorists rule was the brain-child of Douglas Fullerton during the time he was head of the NCC.

It was also Fullerton who opened the canal for skating in winter. Changing rooms are set up at intervals, and my friends tell me that any bright Saturday or Sunday in the winter season thousands of skaters are on the canal. Lights are strung up along five miles of the waterway for night skating, too.

This same man had toboggan slides set up in certain areas of the parks for winter sport.

Because it is a national capital Ottawa is a place of diplomats, embassies, officials and civil servants.

It is also a place or history, of monuments and of people.

Monuments date back to the time of Samuel de Champlain, whose statue stands on Nepean Point facing out to the Ottawa River he knew so well. Also to Lieut-Colonel John By who lived in the years 1779-1836 and who master-minded construction of the Rideau Canal.

History is centred on Parliament Hill. You find it in the main entrance to the Parliament Buildings, where arches join together as a symbol of Canada's federation of provinces "each giving and receiving support from one another."

In the carvings of a lion and unicorn at the main entrance. The lion holds a Union Jack with one paw and the British coat of arms in the other. The unicorn supports Canada's coat of arms and the fleur-de-lys of France.

In the Peace Tower's memorial chamber, dedicated to Canadian men, and women who gave their lives in the service of their country. There, in a gold and glass frame, is a book of Remembrance in which is listed the names of those men and women.

Pages are turned daily so that each is on view on the same day of the same month each year.

The people represent many countries, many languages and many cultures but they are all Ottawans, proud of their city, its scenery, and its history.

They point to the National Art Centre that in its planning stage was considered by many to be a white elephant. And, without exception, they now tell you proudly that it is one of Ottawa's jewels.

They urge you to visit the national art gallery, the archives and library. They insist that you see Laurier House (where Mackenzie King lived with the memories of his mother) and that you stand beside the Centennial Flame on Parliament Hill, symbol of Canada's hundredth birthday.

Macaroni and Mushrooms In a Ring of Fine Flavor

By HILDA BEASTALL

Imagine this Shell Ring in color on your Thanksgiving dinner table and then imagine the delicately fine flavors of the cooked ingredients. You won't be disappointed and your guests won't be looking around furtively for the meat course. A fresh fruit salad for dessert will be all that is wanted.

MACARONI SHELL RING WITH MUSHROOMS

12-ounce pkt. (3 c.) macaroni shells
3 large or 5 small eggs
1 c. water
½ c. powdered skim milk
1 tbsp wheat germ
1 tsp powdered brewers yeast
½ tsp salt
¼ tsp finely chopped mint
1 c. grated Cheddar cheese
1 tbsp finely chopped parsley or chervil

MUSHROOM FILLING OR SAUCE

2 c. coarsely chopped fresh mushrooms
¼ c. soft margarine
3 tbsp finely cut celery with leaves
3 tbsp chopped young horseradish leaves or young spinach leaves
1 tbsp finely cut parsley
¼ tsp salt
3 c. vegetable water (saved) or water with ½ c. powdered skim milk added
½ tsp vegemite or marmite
½ c. fine wholewheat bread crumbs
Diced red ripe tomatoes for topping.

The Shell Ring is baked early in the day, and reheated while you make the Mushroom Filling. The quantities serve 6 generously.

If you do not have a 9-inch ring mould, use a 7½-inch fluted mould — they hold the same quantity.

Cook the macaroni as directed on package, and drain. Beat eggs, add all other ingredients except parsley. Add to cooked macaroni and pour into well greased mould. Bake in moderate oven 350 degs. for about 45 minutes until set but not brown.

Mushroom Filling for Ring Mould (or we'll call it Sauce if served in a separate dish with a "solid" mould).

Melt margarine in heavy frypan; add chopped mushrooms and cook gently for 3 minutes. Add remaining three vegetables and the salt. Cook for three minutes longer.

Heat the 3 cups liquid, add the breadcrumbs and vegemite flavoring; then pour this into frypan with mushroom mixture and bring all to a gentle bubbling.

Pour into centre of Ring Mould, sprinkle with red ripe diced tomatoes. Or, serve as sauce in separate heated dish.

Serve piping hot on heated dinner plates.

Hungry outdoor people may find space for a serving of warm Yeast Gingerbread (recipe given in Monday's column, Oct. 1) and crunchy sweet apples.

Not Fit for a Dog

DEAR ABBY: Our neighbors just returned from a two-week vacation and I hope they had a good time because now I need one.

They left their dog chained in the front yard! Another neighbor agreed to feed him daily, which was the only time the dog was quiet. The rest of the time he barked.

The first night, my husband got up at 4 a.m. to ask the owners to please take the dog inside, only to find there was no one home! The next day we found out the dog owners would be gone for two weeks! We nearly flipped.

Abby, if they couldn't find someone to keep the dog, they should have put it in a kennel.

They are home now, thank heavens, but what do you think of people who would keep the whole neighborhood up with a barking dog for two weeks?—Nerves On End.

DEAR NERVES: What happened to you shouldn't happen to a dog. And what happened to that dog shouldn't happen to a dog, either. You should have immediately notified your local humane society.

Abortion 'Threat To Aged'

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. R. J. Bannister, a general practitioner in neighboring Mississauga says if the abortion rate continues at today's pace there will be too few young working people to support the elderly, and that old folks will be speeded to the grave.

Speaking at a news conference held this week by the Friends of Hippocrates, a group of medical practitioners who are opposed to abortions, he said:

"I visualize the day when every five years, once a person gets above 65, they'll come up for review to see if they can be productive for another five years. If not, they'll be given a ticket — one way."

Dr. Bannister was one of several doctors and two nurses who presented a prepared statement to reporters. It said:

"In 1969, the Canadian government gave our medical profession the power to kill unborn children. There is no order to kill, simply the power to kill.

— INDECENT HASTE

"The profession has responded with indecent haste. In 1972 alone, they killed approximately as many unborn children as the total Canadian losses in the Second World War."

There were 39,500 legal abortions performed in Canada last year, the statement said.

— DON'T TRY

Dr. Philomena Coelho, a University of Toronto obstetrician, said studies have found that 60 to 90 per cent of women seeking abortions used no contraceptive device.

She said abortion in Canada costs the patient nothing, but contraceptives are not free.

"I wonder if doctors were not paid for performing abortions if they would continue to do them," she said. "I doubt it."

HAPPINESS is doing a good deed for a friend, says Muriel Hanson, 3, who is pleased to be able to offer Sandy Gunning, 2, a boost to the water fountain at Surrey's Hjorth Road Park.

Home Computer Shopping

WASHINGTON (WP) — By early next year, if marketing specialist Richard A. Ahern's plans shape up, about half of the households in this area will be able to comparison shop and order merchandise simply by making one telephone call to a computer.

Ahern's scheme, which he describes as the first electronic, in-home shopping system, would permit people with touch tone phones — 49 per cent of the residential subscribers in the metropolitan area — to punch product codes after phoning into a computer centre and listen to a computerized recitation, by "a human-sounding voice," of the four or five lowest prices for housewares, cars, clothing, jewelry and appliances. Users of the system would pay $4 initially for a merchandise catalogue and one cent per price quote.

Dial phones would not be compatible with the computer system, he said.

Ahern's fledgling company, Computer Shopping Inc., is compiling a list of prices from local wholesalers who have indicated they will sell directly through the firm, he said. While the difference between the cost of goods at the factory and retail price is generally 40 per cent in department stores, 30 to 33 per cent in discout stores and 23 to 25 per cent in catalogue stores, Computer Shopping plans a gross margin of 15 to 20 per cent, Ahern said.

"Merchants who wish to complete for the computer shopping business must be willing to accept only a small profit on each sale and make it up in volume," company literature states. "Our system of competitive bidding actually helps to force prices down." The company says it plans to solicit price bids continuously. Merchants and wholesalers who sell through the service will be able to enter price changes by phoning in to the computer, Ahern said.

PERIPHERAL SORT

"We don't expect an initial enthusiastic response by retailers," he said. "They're very competitive. Stores like Reliable (Home Appliances), which have the lowest prices but don't advertise, so a lot of people don't know about them, will enter first." He said his company had talked to so-called discount chains such as Dalmo and George's in a "peripheral sort of way," but said there had been no agreement to submit prices.

"We may have trouble from other retailers if we attempt to include their prices in the data bank and they change their prices," he conceded.

One New York-based shopping service, United Buying Service currently offers discount prices to subscribers of the service here, generally members of labor unions and other large organizations, but quotes prices only at several stores that provide a special discount to the company, Ahern said.

$480 LIMIT

Subscribers to computer shopping will be required to order approximately $480 worth of merchandise a year, Ahern said, and, if they don't, will be charged perhaps 5 to 10 cents per price quote over the phone instead of 1 cent.

Ahern, 30, a behavioral scientist who once was a teacher and clinical psychologist, is head of an engineering company in Walden, N.Y., but plans to move to this area. Associates in the computer sales company here include Robert Van Roijen Jr., an IBM computer professional, and Matt Dick, son of the founder of the A. B. Dick Copy Machine Company.

The computer system has been five years in the making, Ahern said, and grew out of a creative marketing project he worked on while attending the Harvard Business school.

While the project team determined that "sales direct from the factory, with no advertising, was the best of all options," he said, it finally decided that a computer-based, direct-sale system with limited advertising and incentives to salespeople was the practical option.

OPTION TAKEN

After researching 30 market areas around the country, Ahern and company decided Washington, with the highest median income in the U.S., the highest percentage of residential touch tone phones and consumers judged to be "among the most price-conscious in the country," was the spot to setup shop. They have taken an option on space at L'Enfant Plaza and hope eventually to set up several small catalogue showrooms. Their ultimate dream it to pipe in pictures of merchandise on customers' television sets through a special hookup. The system may also be geared to supplying some grocery items, although not at lowered prices, Ahern said.

Gangster Held

PARIS (AP) — French police have arrested Michel Hardouin, the fourth member of a gang alleged to have been led by Jacques Mesrine, wanted for a series of murders and holdups in Canada. Police say Hardouin took part with Mesrine and two others in two attempted bank raids last week. Mesrine was arrested last Friday.

MORE WOMEN'S ACCIDENTS

TORONTO (CP) — The popular belief that young women are safer drivers than single males has suffered a collision with fact.

Female drivers 16 to 24 have more accidents than single men in the same age group, says Facility, the pooling arrangement of insurance companies to cover high-risk drivers.

It says female drivers 21 to 24 had a loss ratio of 107 per cent last year — meaning seven per cent more was paid out than collected in premiums. The highest loss ratio for single men was the 93.3 per cent for those 19 and 20.

But there's a note of grim hope for women's lib. Married males under 21 have the worst loss ratio of all, — 165.8 per cent.

Facility says Canada's worst drivers statistically are in Nova Scotia with a loss ratio in 1972 of 107.1 per cent. Quebec was next at 105.7 per cent, followed by Ontario at 94.7 per cent.

Grasshoppers DO Have Good Points

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba farmers, who wouldn't give you a nickel for a field of grasshoppers, may soon be changing their tune about the creatures.

The main thing the hopper has going for him is that the Japanese are paying as much as $3.80 a pound for his properly cooked Oriental counterpart.

More than 500 metric tons of grasshoppers are eaten annually in Japan and the market is growing.

The growing popularity of pesticides in Japan has cut into Ryoshoku's source of supply and this is one of the main reasons it has turned to Manitoba.

Provincial officials are scouting a number of alternative ways of harvesting. One would be to use students for harvesting by hand, the way it is done in Japan.

Another would be to use hopper "dozers," or sweepers, to gather the insects.

Facilities for blanching and freezing the grasshoppers before shipment also will be needed before Manitoba is ready to enter the grasshopper business, says the department of agriculture.

The grasshopper has long been considered a source of protein as well as a specialty food in Japan.

It is estimated by food experts that three grasshoppers are equal in nutritional value to one egg.

Japanese farm families have traditionally taken a few days off each fall to harvest local grasshoppers for their own use. Once caught, the hoppers are boiled alive, or blanched and cooked in a mixture of soya sauce and sugar. Done this way, they are preserved for as much as two years.

The hoppers have a sweet molasses taste and the texture of a fibrous nut when prepared to Ryoshoku's special recipe of soya sauce, sugar and herbs.

Ryoshoku, which means "a food with two wings," supplies more than half the grasshoppers eaten in Japan.

Welfare Costs Sag

EDMONTON (CP) — The city's welfare bill plunged during the first half of 1973. City officials expect it to be more than $500,000 under estimated expenses for the year.

Keith Wass, social services superintendent, made the prediction on the basis of $1.3 million in public assistance paid out by the city to the end of August.

The bill for that eight-month period was down $500,000 from expenditures over the same period in 1972.

U.K. PUBS TO CLOSE ON CHRISTMAS NIGHT

LONDON (UPI) — Britain's pub keepers decided Tuesday to close down on Christmas night.

The 300 delegates representing 12,000 pub keepers emphatically rejected suggestions from the breweries, which own most British pubs — that they stay open the night of Christmas.

"If we close, nobody is going to die of thirst," one delegate said.

Pub keepers have agitated for 10 years to be allowed a night off with their families. The brewers, who employ pub keepers as managers or tenants, always have opposed the idea.

Officials called the move "an historic decision." One described it as "a startling victory. This is what we have been fighting for all these years."

Profits Are Sweet For Indian Band

ROSEAU RIVER, Man. (CP) — Residents of the Roseau River Indian reserve have gone into the commercial production of honey at a time when a world shortage is developing.

Despite a late start which halved production chances, the reserve expects in its initial year to turn out more than 15,000 pounds of honey with a distinctive taste.

The honey, with its own special wild flower flavor, is made by bees imported from Georgia, with 200 hives spread over five different locations on the reserve.

The venture, launched as a pilot project with the backing of the federal department of Indian affairs and Canada Manpower, also provides much-needed jobs for the reserve, which has about 520 residents.

Between 65 and 75 per cent of the adult population on the reserve was unemployed last May when Winnipeg apiarist Tom Sutherland came up with the idea of using neighboring wild flower country as a honey source.

Sutherland's approach to Chief Dave Courchene of the Manitoba Indian Brotherhood drew a positive response, and a federal government official arranged funds for the training of nine unemployed men.

With Sutherland retained as instructor, a small house was obtained for use as a plant and training site and equipment was purchased.

The undertaking got considerable help from Chief Oliver Nelson of the Roseau River reserve. As a boy, he helped a farmer in bee keeping. Later he learned more about the honey business in a diploma course in agriculture at the University of Manitoba.

Chief Nelson and Don Henry, head of the reserve economic development committee, are making plans for expansion. Boxes and frames will be made in winter. The reserve plans to have 1,350 hives in 1974 with an eventual target of 3,000.

The business got a big boost when Eaton's placed a large order for honey for the gourmet food section of its Winnipeg department store. The reserve plans some day to do its own extracting, packaging and marketing.

SILVER COINS ENTER U.S. FUTURES MART

CHICAGO (UPI) — The international monetary market of the Chicago Mercantile Exchange has started listing U.S. and Canadian silver coin futures for trading.

The contracts listed call for five bags of coins from either nation containing $1,000 worth of coins in each bag. The face value of each contract is $5,000.

Contract months listed for trading are March, June, September and December of 1974.

The coin futures, considerably smaller in value than silver bullion contracts traded on other futures exchanges, enable small traders to participate indirectly in silver futures with less capital.

Collision Means Long Shore Leave

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

All the notices are in English.

This strikes an odd note because the ship is Japanese and she's crewed by Filipinos with the exception of the chief engineer and radio officer, who are Japanese.

She's the ill-fated cargo container ship Sun Diamond which collided with the British freighter Erawan near the entrance to Vancouver harbor last week.

Her second officer, Leanardo Dgbayam explains the notices are in English because his countrymen are instructed in English at high school and the five marine colleges his country operates.

"Japanese," he explains, "We can't speak it, we only understand it."

The Sun Diamond, registered in Osaka, is seven months old. Dgbayam joined her in July. Making stops at Taiwan, Osaka, Vancouver and Seattle, the Sun Diamond averages 40 days for the round trip.

Her stays in port are short:

"About 18 hours, container ships are like express trains!"

The Sun Diamond's collision and the four weeks or so it will take to make her seaworthy again, will give her crew the longest shore time they've had in many weeks.

Although they docked here Saturday the officers and men have already been down town often enough to make comparisons with the only other Canadian city they know.

"Victoria is peaceful," says Dgbayam, "not like Vancouver where there are so very many hippies in the street. Here the streets are quiet."

What have he and his men seen of Victoria so far?

The provincial museum, wax museum and the Legislative Buildings.

He adds, as an afterthought, "I saw Queen Victoria's statue — she is beautiful."

He thinks Victoria girls are beautiful, too, but is quick to say he's engaged to an elementary school teacher back home.

Although the Philippines has its own merchant fleet, the United Philippine Line, and a three-year-old coast guard, Dgbayam and his fellow sailors often sign on with Japanese and German lines.

"The Japanese are really short of seamen," he explains.

STAMPS MARK WEDDING

The British post office will issue two special stamps Nov. 14 to mark the wedding day of Princess Anne.

The rectangular stamps show smiling portraits of the 23-year-old princess and her husband-to-be, cavalry Captain Mark Phillips, 25. One is the regular 3½ pence stamp and the other is the 20 pence denomination.

Bunn Spurns Council Bid

Greater Victoria school board chairman Peter Bunn announced today he will run again for trustee in the Nov. 17 elections.

Bunn, a 50-year-old contractor who lives at 888 Linkleas, is completing his 12th consecutive year on the board, a longer tenure than any other trustee.

A changed attitude in the provincial government toward education since the NDP victory in 1972 is a major reason why he decided to run again, he said.

"I like the way things are progressing," Bunn said.

Trustees are now being called to the education minister's office to discuss changes in the Public Schools Act, he said, and their suggestions are listened to.

"This is the first year that this has happened," he added.

"I was approached to run (for council) in Oak Bay and I thought it over very carefully," Bunn said.

He decided against it because "I think during the next couple of years I can do more for my community as trustee than I can as a freshman alderman."

Other trustees are up for reelection this year are Dr. Harold Knight, finishing his fourth year on the school board, Daphne Temple, also a four-year veteran, and Harry Graham, ending his second year.

Knight said today he hasn't decided yet whether he will run for office again.

Harry Graham, a semi-retired consulting engineer, said today he also will run again for another two-year term as trustee.

Mrs. Temple could not be reached today.

I'M HOMOSEXUAL—MD

NEW YORK (NYT) — Dr. Howard Brown, the Lindsay administration's first health services administrator, Tuesday declared his homosexuality in an effort to end the prejudice homosexuals face getting jobs.

"I know of homosexual priests, clergymen, dentists and politicians. When I served in Mayor Lindsay's cabinet . . . there were other homosexual commissioners known to me," Brown reported in a speech.

Brown, 49, said he disclosed that he was a homosexual three weeks ago before the board of Public Health Association.

He said it was a "tribute to the board" that he was immediately appointed chairman of a committee to combat discrimination "as a matter of sexual preference" in the health community.

Doused in Gas Then Set Afire . . .

BOSTON (UPI) — Four youths forced a 24-year-old woman to pour gasoline over herself and then tossed a lighted match on her Tuesday night, police said. She later died of burns.

The victim was identified as Evelyn Wagler, who had moved in to the area last Friday.

Lieut. Jerome McCallum of the homicide squad said the woman ran out of gas. She walked to a nearby service station and was returning with a can of gasoline when the youths approached.

"She was confronted by four youths and they forced her to pour gas on herself and then they lit a match and threw it on her," said McCallum. "Can you believe that? My God!"

McCallum said the woman was able to talk with him before she died and "she said one of the youths might have been one who told her the night before to get out of the district."

However, McCallum said police had no suspects.

Don't Delay Cutting Beautiful Pampas Plumes

If you want your pampas plumes to decorate the home for six months you must cut them now, before they open out more. If left until fully developed, the seeds fall as soon as the plumes become totally dry in the home warmth. Then you have tiny bits of fluff all over the rugs and upholstery, each with a seed attached.

The last week of September is the time when the silky plumes begin to emerge from the protective sheaths. Now in most gardens they are hanging free and what a pretty sight they are.

Some plants have plumes with a pinkish tinge. Some have short, rather bushy plumes like overgrown rabbit tails. These are variations of the original Cortaderia argentea. Some books still list it as Gynerium argenteum. They belong to the family of grasses as do all other true grasses. This one is native to Argentina.

★

The plants can scarcely be called ideal for small gardens, for the sharply serrated narrow leaves spread in a fountain covering a circle of eight to 10 feet in about five years from a commercial sized nursery plant.

As a feature in larger gardens against dark green shrubs or trees, or in front of a dark fence or wall, the Pampas is handsome.

For the first year after planting there may appear little extension of growth, but so long as a few new growths come up in the following spring, the plant will thrive. Plumes are unlikely in the year after planting.

Sunshine is essential for growth and flowers (plumes) and so is adequate water especially in the first five years. Fertilizer is unnecessary, for the spreading roots will forage for food. A rich clay loam is ideal if well drained in winter.

Free water lying over and around roots for more than a day or two will drown roots of all plants except aquatics, willows, some poplars and their relatives the alders, and a few bog shrubs.

In a sandy soil the pampas requires a barrow load of humus in the planting hole to be sure of maintaining a suitable moisture supply. Once established an occasional thorough soaking of the roots will keep them active.

If you are thinking of pampas for a poolside planting or a nearby patio, remember the finely toothed leaf edges are like the blade edge of a keyhole saw. They snag into all clothing except blue denims (faded or otherwise) and rasp long surface scratches on bare flesh. They take a day or two to heal.

The plumes are usually wanted with long stems for going into large floor vases or urns against a bare wall indoors. Trim off the green leaves neatly, and stand the plume stems in dry containers, having the plumes free of each other so that they may dry thoroughly. If brought in now, they may even last more than one year. But as sure as you leave them to ripen outdoors, they will strew the seeds all over your house.

SOLUTION THURSDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

The technical, and psychological advantage possessed by the expert over the non-expert can be observed in today's deal. The hand came up in a tournament some years ago. An expert was in the West seat. A non-expert was sitting South.

Neither side vulnerable. South deals.

♠ 6 5 2
♡ 9
◇ A K J 4 2

WEST
♠ A Q 4
♡ K 10 7 3
◇ 9 7 3

EAST
♠ K J 10 8 7
♡ Q 8 5 2
◇ 8 6 5
♣ 9

SOUTH
♠ 9 3
♡ A J 6 4
♣ A K Q 4 2

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	4 ♣	Pass
5 ♣	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ace of ♠.

The bidding was quite good, especially when one considers that North-South were non-expert. A three-no-trump contract would have been defeated immediately, with the defenders cashing five spade tricks.

On West's opening lead of the spade ace, East played the encouraging ten-spot. West then continued with the spade four, East's king winning. To trick three East led the seven of spades.

Declarer, being certain that West had been dealt the doubleton A-x of spades, trumped the third spade lead with his queen, to make sure that West wouldn't overruff. West calmly followed suit with the spade queen.

When declarer next cashed his ace and king of trumps, he discovered, to his sorrow, that West's jack of trumps had become the setting trick. Had the four outstanding trumps been divided 2-2, declarer's ruffing of the third spade lead with the queen would not have been costly. It is apparent that if declarer had ruffed the third spade lead with a low trump, he would have fulfilled his contract.

After play had ended, declarer turned to the West expert and inquired: "How come you opened the ace of spades from A-Q-x? I was sure you had a doubleton."

The answer came out, simply: "Neither of you had ever bid no-trump, so it must have been that you didn't have a spade stopper. My partner figured to have the king. Also, you had bid every other suit. Actually, I would have opened a spade no matter what my spade holding had been."

Declarer's ruffing of the third spade with the queen was wrong for another reason: if West had started with the A-x of spades, then East would have possessed the K-Q-J-10-x-x. Surely, with this holding, East would have bid some number of spades over North's diamond response. But, as is obvious, declarer's reasoning did not go far enough—or, perhaps, he was afraid of the unknown.

Snow Fence Removed Before Killer Storm

BARRIE, Ont. (CP) — Highway maintenance crews removed a snow fence from a stretch of Highway 400 nine days before a crash which killed 12 persons in a freak snowstorm just south of here March 18.

The inquest into the 12 deaths has opened with more than 30 witnesses. Another 30 are still to testify into the 43-vehicle pileup which included a truck loaded with lumber and a bus.

Much of the first day was devoted to identification of the bodies.

Later, the five-member jury heard accounts of the flaming crash and testimony from Alec Boyd, a road maintenance supervisor with the ministry of transportation.

Mr. Boyd said there had been three weeks of warm weather prior to removal of the snow fence which was taken down a month earlier this year than it was last year.

Other testimony said police had closed the divided, six-lane highway briefly on the 18th because of the storm.

The victims were identified as:

The four members of the Johnston family of Bramalea, Ont., father John, 36, mother Florence, 32, daughter Katharine, 8, and son Michael, 6.

Susan Reese, 26, Toronto, died of extensive burns; Frederick Short, 22, Toronto, burns; Ilene Jones, 26, Toronto, injuries other than burns; Peter Linfoot, 23, Toronto, brain damage; David Eakins, 28, Toronto, brain damage; Geoffrey Johnson, 39, Newmarket, Ont., internal injuries.

42 Violent Shows Axed From Children's Viewing

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — In a victory they hope will set a U.S.-wide precedent, opponents of violence in television stories have succeeded in getting a station to ban 42 children's shows and to precede 81 others which chimed warnings to parents.

Among the shows banned are Batman, Superman, The Lone Ranger and Mighty Mouse.

The agreement was announced by KTTV and the National Association for Better Broadcasting and Action for Children's Television.

The groups had filed a petition with the Federal Communications Commission, asking that KTTV's application for renewal of its broadcasting license be denied on the grounds its programing emphasized violence. They agreed to withdraw their petition in return for the stations's program changes.

Of the 42 series the protesters want removed from the air, KTTV currently carries only three, Superman, Batman and Aqua Man.

The station agreed to stop broadcasting them within 90 days and not to carry any of the 39 others. The loss of the three will cost the station $60,000, the association said.

Any time a program from a list of 81 shows is broadcast before 8:30 p.m. bongs will be sounded by a soft chime, a slide reading "Caution to Parents" will be displayed on the screen and an announcer will say:

"Parents, we wish to advise that because of violence or other possibly harmful elements, certain portions of the following program may not be suitable for young children."

The violence alert will begin in about two weeks.

It will be applied to shows such as Have Gun Will Travel, Highway Patrol, Gunsmoke, Roy Rogers, Sunset Strip, The Untouchables and Man From Uncle.

The live, filmed versions of Batman, and The Lone Ranger are on the warning list, while the animated cartoon versions of both are on the banned list.

Other banned shows include Spider Man, Ultra Man, Hercules, Marine Boy and Super-President.

The association's executive vice-president, Frank Orme, said it is planned to use the agreement with KTTV as a precedent to pressure broadcasters throughout the United States "to adopt responsible policies in the presentation of programs viewed by children and youth."

Patients Home Early

NEW YORK (AP) — Patients undergoing cataract surgery can leave hospital within hours with no restrictions on their activity, four New York eye doctors report. Results from a study of hundreds of cataract patients by New York Medical College scientists showed that patients released immediately fared as well as those severely restricted and kept in hospital for 10 days.

Collision Slows Commuter Rush

LONDON (UPI) — An empty train rammed into the side of one filled with commuters Tuesday, slightly injuring seven persons and snarling morning rush-hour traffic on one of London's main commuter routes.

Police said the two electric trains collided near the Liverpool Street Station, forcing railway officials to turn off the electric current so the passengers could finish their journey on foot.

Tuna Potato Puff

2 (6-7 oz.) cans Gold Seal tuna
2 cups mashed potatoes (made from one 4-serving envelope of instant mashed potatoes)
2 eggs, separated
½ tsp. dry mustard
½ tsp. Tabasco
1 cup shredded cheese, divided into two parts
½ cup corn flake crumbs

Combine mashed potatoes, egg yolks, dry mustard and Tabasco. Stir in tuna and ½ cup shredded cheese. Beat egg whites until stiff; fold into potato-tuna mixture. Turn into 2-quart casserole. Combine corn flake crumbs with remaining ½ cup cheese; sprinkle over top of casserole. Bake in a 375°F. oven for 45 minutes. Serves 4-6.

You can try this tasty menu idea using delicious Gold Seal solid white, flaked white or chunk light tuna.

NDP to Help Indians Adopt

The provincial government will consider some form of "subsidized adoption" to allow more Indian families to adopt Indian children, Human Resources Minister Norman Levi said Tuesday.

Also, he said, his department will be putting less emphasis on the age of prospective parents who want to adopt. Parents of 40 or 50 years of age "or even older" will be considered.

The minister told the legislature that of 19 Indian children adopted between April and August of this year, only two were taken into Indian homes.

Indian groups are quite correct in criticizing the government in its adoption practices, Levi said, because the adoption of Indian children in white families "only exacerbates the breakdown of their culture."

Levi was speaking to second reading of the Amendments to the Adoption Act which protect the rights of native children under federal law if they are adopted by white parents.

The bill, resulting from a recent Supreme Court of B.C. ruling in which Victoria Judge M. L. Drake said the adoption act did not properly ensure the rights of Indian children, was approved unanimously.

Levi said his department was reviewing a number of adoption procedures and talking to the attorney-general's department about court procedures "which are long and drawn out."

Levi said since he put a moratorium on adoption applications, last July 1, parents have changed their attitudes and are more willing to take in children who are older and greatly in need of homes, as well as taking in handicapped children.

FARM BILL PASSES

After a total of five hours of debate Monday and Tuesday, second reading was approved 44 to 6, with the Socreds supporting the government.

Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich closed debate on Bill 9 by saying farmers needed immediate legislation to solve their economic problems and repeated that the bill was vague so the government could draft income assurance programs suitable to each commodity.

Opposition members, he said, were "afraid the legislation would allow the government to do too much for farmers."

While the Social Credit members supported second reading, all opposition spokesmen criticized it for being too vague and giving the cabinet too much power to legislate farm income schemes.

Liberal leader David Anderson (Victoria) used the old phrase "blank cheque" legislation to describe the bill and said the sweeping powers it gives the minister are unnecessary "in time of peace."

While Stupich has explained the legislation will provide for an income insurance scheme for all farmers in the province, the bill itself says the cabinet can establish any scheme to guarantee an income for farmers.

Controls Set Up For Animal Labs

Licensing and inspection procedures for control of veterinary laboratories will be established under legislation introduced in the house Tuesday.

"We're really concerned about the spread of disease — so we want to get in on control of it," Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich said outside the legislature.

He said one main, government laboratory where livestock diseases are diagnosed operates now in Abbotsford but other labs are going to be set up privately throughout the province and the government wants to be able to control their quality.

The bill states no veterinary laboratory may operate without a licence, which will be granted by inspectors from the livestock department, and that labs must open their doors to inspectors.

Any persons contravening the act will be subject on summary conviction to a fine of not more than $500.

Stupich said regulations governing veterinary labs will be established by cabinet order and licensing will begin as soon as the bill is proclaimed.

Another bill introduced to the legislature by Health Minister Dennis Cocke would change the name of the Department of Health Services and Hospital Insurance to the Department of Health.

The Beef Grading Act was also brought in by Stupich at the close of the sitting.

The act reactivates legislation cancelled several years ago, Stupich said, and sets up provincial grading standards in line with federal regulations made under the Canada Agricultural Products Standards Act.

Stoph Replaces Ulbricht

BERLIN (UPI) — The East German parliament today elected Willi Stoph, 59-year-old premier, to replace the late Walter Ulbricht as chairman of the council of state, or chief of state.

He was nominated by Erich Honecker, the Communist Party first secretary. As usual, the vote off the Peoples Chambers (Volkskammer) was unanimous.

One way

it's still Electrohome component stereo performance.

Because there's an all-new Electrohome solid state component receiver at the heart of every full sized 1974 Electrohome stereo.

Choose the basic Electrohome component receiver and you start with a fully featured model in one of three power ranges. 100 watts. 150 watts. Or 300 watts, peak music power. Each one includes all the refinement stereo buffs look for in a quality stereo component, including AFC, filters, flywheel tuning, stereo indicator light, the works. And built-in four-channel sound circuitry in every model.

From there, you can add extras to your Electrohome stereo as you like 'em. Matching DUAL and Electrohome record changers. Built-in 8-track tape players. Extension speakers. Casette decks. The works.

Even a Deilcraft cabinet.

There are thirteen new Electrohome console stereo models to choose from, with the performance of Electrohome component stereo all wrapped up in the warmth of a hand-rubbed Deilcraft furniture cabinet. Same control panel. Same chassis and features. Same component performance.

The best place to experience 1974 Electrohome stereo is, naturally enough, at your Electrohome dealer's. In either basic component or bedecked console.

Ball for Expo '74 in Spokane Tossed Into Victoria Court

SPOKANE, Wash. (CP) — It's up to British Columbia to save face for Canada at Expo '74, this city's world fair dedicated to a beautiful environment.

Like Expo 67 in Montreal, the world fair here is being built on islands, but in Spokane, the islands were already in place in the middle of the Spokane River. Some of the Montreal islands were made of fill.

Canada's decision to pull out of the fair, made in July, shocked and angered officials here, but most temper their anger with happiness that British Columbia is participating, the only Canadian province to do so.

"Along with many other people here, I find it inconceivable that our neighbor to the north would withdraw after making an extensive committment," said acting mayor Del Jones.

And Expo '74 general manager Mel Alter said he feels "a deep sense of loss that Canada isn't going to participate and I don't know if I dare hope for a change of mind."

"But we're delighted to hear that B.C. is going to come in."

One Seattle newspaper, The Spokesman-Review, lambasted the decision and said Canada "has tarnished its image by reneging on its pledge to participate."

What exactly is Expo '74, a world fair that has been building with little publicity?

To start with, it's the only exposition approved for the United States for the 1970s by the 36-nation Bureau of International Expositions in Paris. It's also one of the first events in the celebrations marking the U.S. Bicentennial in 1976.

The fair, to run from May 4-Nov. 3 next year, will be held on a 100-acre site on two islands just yards from the grimy downtown core of this northeastern Washington city.

Fair officials admit the fair won't compare with Canada's, and say it should more properly be compared to the Seattle fair of 1962.

But even that comparison is not exact, because the largest pavilion at Seattle was only 15,000 square feet, while the Russian pavilion, the largest here, will be 52,000 square feet.

"We think it will be a jewel box of a world fair," is the way Mr. Alter put it.

Already, preparation for the fair has transformed the city.

Before work started, the islands were a tangle of neglected warehouses, railroad yards and industrial junk. When the fair is over, the entire site will be turned over to the city for use as a park.

On top of that, the city will also gain a 2,700-seat theatre, a legacy of the Washington State pavilion.

Planning for the $70-million exposition began in spring, 1970, and the Canadian government was the first foreign government to announce its participation, in May, 1972.

HAD FIRST CHOICE

The Canadian plan was a pavilion costing about $1.8 million and the country, being so swift off the mark, had first choice of sites.

Canadian officials soon began arriving here and there was talk of how Canada would set up an ecologically-conscious pavilion. There were even rumors of a natural-foods restaurant connected to the exhibit.

It's almost laughable to say that," said Mr. Jones. "You are a great country with tremendous resources and the money for your exhibit was just a drop in the bucket."

The Americans are particularly puzzled by Canada's tight money policy because the economic fallout from the fair is expected to benefit the Western provinces.

Jack Geraghty, in charge of the fair's marketing operations, said Expo '74 visitors are projected at 4.8 million, many of them making the fair just one stop on a Pacific Northwest vacation that would naturally include Canada.

Many countries have already announced plans to exhibit, the Soviet Union, Japan, Taiwan and South Korea among them.

Editor Named

OTTAWA (CP) — David Humphreys, 34, has been appointed managing editor of Ottawa Journal succeeding George Paterson, 66, who is retiring but who will remain with the paper as an adviser.

Humphreys came to The Journal after a four-year posting with the London bureau of F-P Publications.

MINE AVOIDED DEAL

VANCOUVER (CP) — A British Columbia mining company listed as a potential participant in an allegedly fraudulent, Mafia-type stock swapping scheme in California shied clear of any involvement, a company official has claimed.

Ray L. De Proy, managing director of Paramount Mining Ltd., said he was advised by company president R. V. Markham that promoters of the California scheme had contacted him (Markham) to make a deal.

De Proy said that Markham, presently in California, told him Monday in a telephone conversation that he (Markham) had been presented with some kind of deal but it had been rejected.

"He told these people the proposal was of no interest to Paramount," De Proy said.

Paramount officials were contacted after it was learned it was this B.C. firm that San Francisco area law enforcement officials had referred to in disclosing action taken to break up a multi-million dollar stock fraud operation in California.

Pension Plan Talks Due

OTTTAWA (CP) — Welfare Minister Mare Lalonde and his provincial counterparts will try to reach agreement during an Oct. 11-12 meeting here on gearing all Canada Pension Plan benefits to cost-of-living increases.

At present, there is a ceiling of two-per-cent-per-year on such increases.

Lalonde proposed removing the ceiling when he met provincial welfare ministers last spring, and most of the provinces suggested that a decision be delayed until fall, pending a major study of the plan.

Changes requie the consent of two-thirds of the provinces representing two-thirds of the population.

Deal 'Didn't Have Part in Chile Recognition'

OTTAWA (CP) — The external affairs department has denied that the pending sale of six aircraft to the national airline of Chile was a major factor in Canada recognizing the military junta there.

A report in the Globe and Mail said the $5 million deal involved de Havilland Aircraft of Canada.

The report quoted Pierre Charpentier, new head of the department's Latin American division, as saying trade considerations were the foremost factor in recognition of the junta that overthrew the elected government of Salvadore Allende Sept. 11.

An external affairs spokesman said Charpentier denies making that statement in that context.

And Robert McIntyre, de Havilland market development director, denied in Toronto that the company had put pressure on the government to facilitate the sales.

"It's far too serious an issue for one company to be involved in that way," he said.

"We're not pressuring these people" to form Canadian foreign policy, he said.

The external affairs spokesman also said higher-ranked officials state that "the reasons for Canada's recognition of the military regime in Chile were clearly expressed in a statement Saturday by External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp."

In his statement, Sharp said recognition was accorded the junta headed by Gen. Augusto Pinoche Ugarte to aid Canadian citizens and many other persons affected by the coup and to facilitate handling Canadian interests in Chile.

These would include trade matters.

Meet Probes Waste Woes

OTTAWA (CP) — Scientists concerned with the land's ability to dispose of human and industrial waste are meeting here to trade information and expose areas needing greater research.

The three-day conference has attracted about 250 experts from North America and Europe to discuss divergent, but related, topics ranging from the use of liquid poultry wastes in woodlands to the effect of underground water on radioactive wastes.

Behind the talks — and what some delegates said helped prompt the conference — is growing concern over the effect of waste on the environment.

John E. Harrison of Ottawa, a scientist with the Geological Survey of Canada, suggested in a discussion on the geologic aspects of mountain coal mine waste that miners dump their tailings on gently rolling slopes, preferably facing the north.

"Present day waste dump design and placement must not only take into account economics, but an array of environmental restraints," he said in a paper presented to the conference.

To get plants to grow on waste dumped from a mountain coal mine, for instance, the slope of the dumped waste cannot be greater than 25 or 26 degrees. Plants have difficulty rooting if the angle is steeper.

He added that wastes dumped on the south side of a mountain tend to get very hot in the sun, often killing plants. It was more likely a north slope would revegetate better than a south one.

Dr. Harrison also suggested that grass, ragweed or other fast growing cover be planted on mine tailings first, increasing the likelihood that trees would grow if planted in the future.

The angle of dumped waste slopes was also important for stability. Sharp angles lead to landslides.

In another talk, E. M. Watkins of the University of Guelph's crop science department outlined experiments aimed at growing plants on organic wastes, sewage sludge and rock phosphate spread over acid uranium mine tailings or waste.

Reed canarygrass planted on uranium tailings treated with sewage sludge, for instance, grew relatively well, but Dr. Watkins said the cost of treating one waste with another to encourage plant growth around Elliott Lake, Ont., was prohibitive.

Europe GI Role Stressed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An international committee headed by Sen. Jacob Javits said Tuesday it is necessary to keep U.S. ground troops in Europe to guarantee the security of the United states and its allies.

The committee of nine, composed of prominent statesmen and parliamentarians from North America and western Europe, recommended keeping United States soldiers in Europe in a report that will be presented to the North Atlantic assembly at Ankara later this month.

The committee was created two years ago by the assembly to undertake a full review of the NATO alliance.

Javits told a news conference that continuation of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization was as essential as ever, "not so much because of a threat of armed aggression as because of the political pressure which the Soviet Union is in a position to exert on Europe."

He said the nine-member panel voted unanimously to ask the North Atlantic assembly to adopt its report, which is based on a two-year study.

Other recommendations in the report included "gradual reduction and elimination of tariff and nontariff barriers to trade," adjusting agricultural production to demand, and a reformed international monetary system.

—Charles McIntosh and Family.

9 IN MEMORIAM

DE MACEDO — In loving memory of Flying Officer John Bernard Joseph de Macedo, RCAF, who died of injuries sustained on active service overseas, Oct. 3, 1943.
Eternal rest grant unto him, O Lord, and let perpetual light shine upon him. May he rest in peace.
—Inserted by his loving parents and brother, Frank.

KNIGHT — In loving memory of a dear wife, mother and grandmother, Alice Knight, who passed away October 3, 1972.
Peacefully sleeping, resting at last.
The world's weary trouble and trials are past.
In silence she suffered, in patience she bore,
Till God called her home to suffer no more —Fondly remembered by her loving husband, Daniel (Dan) and family.

KNIGHT — In loving memory of a dear mother and grandmother, Alice Knight, who passed away, October 3, 1972.
Dear mother, you are not forgotten,
Though on earth, you are no more,
Still in memory, you are with us.
As you always were before.
—Fondly remembered by her loving daughter Mrs. Alice Wood and grandson and granddaughter, Mr. and Mrs. John Wood and family.

OLFREY — In loving memory of a dear husband, dad and grandad, who fell asleep Oct. 3, 1972.
Lonely is the home without you,
Life to us is not the same.
All the world would be like heaven if we could have you back again.
What he suffered, he told but few,
He did not deserve what he went through.
Tired and weary, he made no fuss, but he tried so hard to stay with us.
Two tired eyes are sleeping,
Two willing hands are still,
The one who worked so hard for us
Is resting at Gods will.

Announcing the beginning of the end

The last self-owned apartments on Beach Drive in Oak Bay

Frankly, when we started we never expected to be able to build such an exceptional apartment featuring such spacious and luxuriously appointed rooms throughout, still provide a planned recreation complex that has its own sauna room, exercise pavilion, therapeutic pool, hobby room, freezer room and underground electronically secured parking.

Close by the world-famous Oak Bay Marina and Restaurant, a constant parade of graceful yachts and cruisers, lovely Windsor Park rose gardens and just about anything else you would want at the Oak Bay Village.

As we say . . . each apartment is larger and more luxuriously appointed than you would expect at these prices.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO bring the desired results do so usually, not through a lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday call:

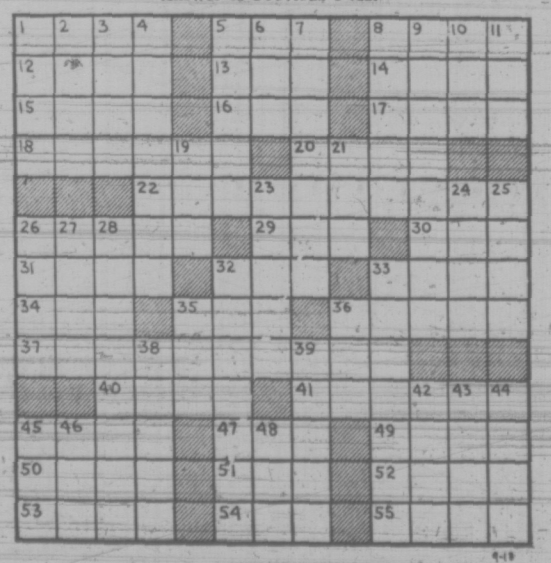
Answer to Previous Puzzle



Motorbike Ruled An Auto

OTTAWA (CP) — A motorbike is an automobile under the Alberta Insurance Act, the Supreme Court of Canada ruled Tuesday.

For that reason Alberta bike owners who buy insurance policies are entitled to coverage for injuries suffered by their passengers, the court ruled in a unanimous judgment.

As a result, Daniel Twa of Clive, Alta., will collect $30,000 from the Co-Operative Fire and Casualty Co. for injuries he suffered in a bike-truck accident July 26, 1969, near Lacombe.

George Sinclair, owner of the bike and the driver, was killed in the accident. Twa was injured and sued the Sinclair estate for $30,000, which he claimed he was entitled to under Mr. Sinclair's insurance.

The insurance company, denying liability, claimed that motorcycle passengers are not included in the coverage it extended to Sinclair.

It also argued that the Insurance Act of the province allowed it to restrict its passenger coverage to cars and trucks and that Mr. Sinclair was aware of this.

The high court said the language of an insurance policy must clearly state exceptions to coverage and any doubts are to be decided in favor of the persons buying the insurance.

Sinclair bought a standard auto insurance policy and the Alberta act describes automobiles as including "all self-propelled vehicles, their trailers, accessories and equipment."

"There can be no doubt," said the Supreme Court, "that a motorcycle is a self-propelled vehicle within the meaning of the act."

LADY KILLER APPEALS . . . FOR DEATH

SEOUL (Reuter) — Many men have fought from one court to another to have a sentence changed, but 30-year-old Choe Yung-il is different: He is appealing for death.

Choe, who admits the murder of his mistress after a quarrel, is prepared to go as far as the South Korean Supreme Court to seek what he believes to be justice.

Choe won a partial victory Tuesday when the appeal court decided to increase his sentence to 15 years from 10.

NOTICE

The following items have been submitted to the Motor Carrier Commission for their approval:

1. Charter Tariff No. 3, which makes a number of very minor changes in the charges for charter coach service.

2. Express Tariff No. 3, which represents an across-the-board increase in charges for express handled on buses.

3. Public Passenger Tariff No. 3, which re-defines certain zone limits between Colwood and Port Renfrew, and makes corresponding alterations in passenger fares, and also makes slight increases in commutation rates. This is not an across-the-board fare increase, and it contains some fare reductions as well.

Premier's Wife Opens Craft Show

An exhibition of handicrafts made by the handicapped will be opened by Premier Dave Barrett's wife Shirley Oct. 9 in Hillside Mall.

Thirteen agencies and three individuals will be displaying a wide array of articles including painting, silk screen work, dolls, driftwood, and upholstery.

Demonstrations of various skills will also be given.

Alec Reid, of Goodwill Enterprises, said the "exhibition will show the community at large how a full life can still be led though those taking part in it may be handicapped or otherwise disadvantaged."

After the opening at 3 p.m. the exhibits will be displayed until Oct. 13.

New Centre For Jews Studied

TEL AVIV (UPI) — Prime Minister Golda Meir called a cabinet meeting today to consider the possibility of Holland replacing Austria as a transit centre for Jews emigrating from the Soviet Union to Israel.

Mrs. Meir revealed plans for the meeting on her return to Israel Tuesday night after a fruitless attempt to talk Austrian Chancellor Bruno Kreisky into keeping open the Schoenau Castle transit camp outside Vienna.

Dutch Foreign Minister Max Van Der Stoel said Sunday Holland might be prepared to replace Austria as a way station for Soviet Jews travelling to Israel.

B.C. TO GOBBLE 175,000 TURKEYS

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia residents are expected to eat about 175,000 turkeys — 2.5 million pounds — during the Thanksgiving holiday weekend, the manager of the B.C. Turkey Marketing Board said Tuesday.

Kirk Stanley said the price of frozen birds at the retail level has held steady at about 79 cents a pound the last couple of months because stores pre-bought in June and July and are still selling that stock.

The wholesale price of turkeys bought now is about 75 to 80 cents a pound. When these turkeys reach the retail market, they'll sell at about 89 to 98 cents a pound, Stanley said.

Wholesale price increases are due to higher feed costs. "One type of feed rose $26 a ton in the last six weeks," he said.

Feed costs now appear to have levelled off, so there shouldn't be any major price jumps between now and Christmas, he said.

EMERGENCY NURSES ORGANIZE SEMINAR

A two-day seminar on emergency care to be held at Royal Jubilee Hospital Oct. 18 and 19 is expected to attract at least 125 nurses from throughout Vancouver Island.

A spokesman for the hospital's emergency department, organizing the program, said it is hoped to make the seminar an annual event.

Doctors and senior nurses will present lectures on emergency management of a variety of injuries, the responsibilities of the emergency room nurse and care of patients with multiple injuries.

Lectures will be held in the auditorium of the Eric Martin Institute. Invitations have gone to hospitals from Alert Bay, off northern Vancouver Island, to Lady Minto Hospital on Salt Spring Island.

Pearkes Clinic Needs Helpers

Previous experience is not necessary and volunteers will be asked to put in two or three hours a week.

Sooke Coroner-Judge Murphy Retiring

Provincial court judge and coroner Eugene Murphy has submitted his resignation to the attorney-general.

The 65-year-old Sooke resident will retire as soon as his appointment is rescinded by order-in-council.

He said today he expects that to happen within the next day or two.

He is retiring five years before the mandatory retirement age for provincial court judges in order "to do the things I want but have never had time to do before."

Murphy, a former B.C. Police officer and Mountie has served as Sooke Provincial Court magistrate and judge since 1961.

The attorney-general's department will decide the future of both the court and coroner's office. There is some speculation both functions will be transferred to Victoria.

Murphy said Sooke, unlike Central Saanich, Sidney and Ganges where small provincial courts still prevail, was a "unique situation" in that it never had adequate court facilities.

Police court, averaging 15 to 20 criminal and traffic cases a month, was held in an office in the RCMP detachment.

Coroner's inquiries and inquests, averaging 20 a year were conducted "anywhere we could get them — in a vacant room or community hall."

Pact Ratified

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States Senate has ratified by 93 to 0 an international convention designed to deal with increasing pirating of phonograph records and tapes. The agreement was drafted at a 41-country conference in Geneva in 1971 and pledges to deal through domestic law with illicit duplication of records which have an estimated annual commercial sale of $300 millions.

FIRST TO FILE papers for the Nov. 17 municipal elections in Greater Victoria is Saanich mayoralty candidate Ald. Frank Waring. He watches today as municipal clerk Gordon Hayward checks the voters' list. A member of Saanich council for five years, Waring is foregoing the second of his current two-year term on council to enter the mayoralty race. A native son of Saanich, Waring is chairman of the municipal planning committee and is pledged to work for the roads and drainage referendum to be voted on Nov. 17.

Slick 'Could Melt Pole'

NAIROBI, Kenya (Reuter) — The United Nations "earth-watch" campaign to save the environment was launched here Tuesday with a warning that a big enough oil slick could melt the north polar ice-cap.

The United Nations environment secretariat, to be based in Kenya, will try to co-ordinate a global strategy to stop mankind polluting itself out of existence. Its headquarters in a new 28-storey building were formally opened by President Jomo Kenyatta of Kenya, who declared: "We have but one world and that we must preserve."

Later, the secretariat's executive director, Maurice Strong of Canada, and his staff held a news conference to detail the kind of man-made calamities that the pace of industrial progress could set off.

"If I wanted to melt the polar ice cap I would know how to go about it," said Dr. Robert Frosh, deputy executive director and a former assistant secretary of the United States Navy.

Frosh said scientists believe an oil slick spread over a stretch of the polar ice could enable the sun's heat to melt the ice cap at that point. It was possible that the pool of water thus created could go on enlarging itself.

The UN officials said this was the kind of disaster that could — although it probably would not — befall the world.

Strong said: "The release of extra energy by mankind, and man-made dust in the atmosphere, make it possible that changes in the world's climate, for instance, could be experienced much faster than we expected."

One task of the new environment secretariat will be to monitor data from an "earth-watch" satellite, which will help to pinpoint major threats to the environment.

Nuclear Ship Over-Spent

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The navy has announced a delay of five to 11 months for delivery of the nuclear-powered aircraft carrier Nimitz and confirms that it, and its sister ship, the Eisenhower, will run $273.6 million more than first expected.

The Nimitz originally was scheduled to join the fleet next month as America's second nuclear-powered aircraft carrier. But a spokesman Sunday estimated that delivery will not take place until between March and September of next year.

Rep. Les Aspin, (D—Wis.), charged that the delays and other cost-adding factors would result in a $273.6 million cost overrun on the Nimitz and the Eisenhower, which was scheduled to be delivered 21 months after the Nimitz. Defense officials did not dispute this figure.

Aspin also said the total costs of the Nimitz and the Eisenhower and a third unnamed carrier to be delivered in 1980 "will be at least $2.3 billion." The navy concurred.

The navy said the need for larger reactors and contractors' labor problems were partially responsible for the delays.

ELKS REMOVE WHITES ONLY REGULATION

CHICAGO (AP) — The membership of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks voted by a 4-to-1 majority Tuesday to permit minority groups to join the organization.

Robert Yothers of Seattle, grand exalted ruler of the fraternal order, said ratification means that the word "white" will be deleted from the Elks' constitution and statutes as a requisite to membership.

He said the results of the vote, tabulated at the Elks national headquarters in Chicago, confirmed his prediction that the change, approved by a 3-to-1 majority at the national convention in Chicago in July, would be ratified by the full membership.

Most of us share the hard-to-shake belief that everything was somewhat better in the old days than it is today. But automatic washers, flush toilets, panty hose, frozen dough and eviscerated turkeys are blessings we wouldn't want to give up. In fact, there are many things for which we should be thankful, says writer Helen Porter of Mount Pearl, Newfoundland. This Saturday in Weekend Magazine.

NIXON REFUND MORE THAN TAX

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — The Providence Journal-Bulletin said today that President Nixon paid $1,670 in federal taxes for 1970 and 1971 and received $131,503 in federal income tax refunds for the two-year period.

The Journal-Bulletin said government sources provided documents showing that President and Mrs. Nixon paid $792.81 in federal taxes in 1971, while receiving a $72,614.43 refund. It said the documents show that in 1971 the Nixons paid $878.03 in taxes and got a $58,998.41 refund.

The Baltimore Sun reported on Sept. 11 that Nixon apparently paid no income tax for the two years because of his deductions for interest, real estate taxes and the donation of his vice-presidential papers to the National Archives. These deductions, the Sun said, exceeded the President's salary of $200,000 a year.

Nixon issued personal finance statements in 1968, 1969 and 1972. He said at a news conference last month that his 1970 and 1971 tax returns were audited by the Internal Revenue Service and no change was ordered.

The Journal-Bulletin said today, "Taxes paid by the Nixons in 1970-71 are roughly equivalent to taxes paid by someone who earns about $7,000 a year, claims one exemption and does not itemize deductions, according to tax manuals."

Unions Plan War Rally

Union leaders in British Columbia will meet in Victoria next Tuesday to map strategy in their battles against the government's proposed labor code.

The B.C. Federation of Labor, which with 200,000 members is the principal labor body in the province, has bitterly denounced the code, introduced into the legislature Monday.

B.C. Fed officers and representatives of affiliated unions will meet in the Empress at 10 a.m. Tuesday and it is expected that lobbying of MLAs will begin as soon as the meeting ends.

But in contrast to the BCFL position, the leader of British Columbia's biggest trade union has adopted a wait-and-see position for the time being.

Jack Munro, regional president of the International Woodworkers of America, said in a telephone interview from Bermuda that his union won't attack the labor code at least until it has been thoroughly studied.

He said he wants time to study the code. He welcomed the appointment of former IWA regional president Jack Moore as a vice-chairman of the new Labor Relations Board saying "he has plenty of experience to do a good job."

He added that labor has for years sought a permanent Labor Relations Board, one of the features of the new legislation.

Munro's comments were seen as indicating a split between the federation and its biggest affiliated union, but B.C. Fed secretary Ray Haynes denied any suggestion of division.

Haynes said he is "sure" Munro has been "misinterpreted. He is in Bermuda where I am sure there aren't copies of the bill." Haynes said one newspaper which published Munro's comments today is "making a mountain out of a molehill."

He said the federation "can't wait for him to get back from Bermuda" and was moving immediately to lobby for changes in the labor code which had "shocked" federation leaders.

He said none of the persons the federation recommended for consideration among the appointments announced Tuesday to the Labor Relations Board was considered.

The cabinet appointed Paul Weiler, law professor and arbitrator from Toronto, as chairman and Moore, Vancouver Provincial Court Judge Nancy Morrison and Ed Peck, president of Towboat Industrial Relations Association in Vancouver, as vice-chairmen.

B.C. Gas Crunch Imminent

A shortage of natural gas in B.C. with the potential of causing losses of more than $20 million in production and more than 250,000 man-days could begin as soon as two weeks from now, Attorney-General Alex Macdonald told the legislature Tuesday.

Macdonald said he has obtained figures from major industrial operators in the province who will be seriously affected by the threatened shortage of natural gas caused by water in wells encountered by Amoco Canada Ltd., one of the major suppliers to Westcoast Transmission.

Westcoast has announced it will cut back supplies on a pro rata basis to all its customers, including the three major distributors who transport natural gas for use in B.C. homes and industries.

Macdonald said the "crunch" caused by the natural gas shortage could come as soon as Oct. 15, and "getting severe" by Nov. 1.

Macdonald tabled in the house copies of his figures after saying he had expressed the government's concern over the siutation to federal Energy Minister Donald Macdonald, who met the attorney-general earlier in the day.

Hardest-hit, according to Alex Macdonald's figures, will be Cominco's operations at Trail, with a potential production loss of $7.5 million and a loss of 150,000 man-days in employee time.

The second largest potential loss was put at $3.2 million in production losses and a loss of 45,000 man-days, by Consumers Glass of Burnaby.

A complete plant shutdown could result in the phasing-out of the operation, creating a financial loss to the community of more than $5 million.

Alex Macdonald said he had impressed on the federal minister the concern felt by the provincial government about the situation and had asked "in no uncertain terms" Otta-

Segretti Says Sorry

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Donald Segretti, his testimony interrupted by a bomb threat, told the Senate Watergate Committee today that ex-presidential aide Dwight Chapin hired him to conduct political sabotage on Democratic hopefuls last year.

Segretti testified that he received $45,000 in salary and expenses for his efforts, which he said he mounted in "about half a dozen" states.

He said Chapin, an old friend from college days, hired him late in 1971 to play "pranks" on Democratic hopefuls. Chapin often told him exactly what to do, he added.

Chairman Sam Ervin (Dem.—N.C.) abruptly adjourned the hearing shortly after 11 a.m. EDT until early afternoon "very much against my will" after being informed by police that there had been a telephoned bomb threat at the Senate caucus room where the hearings are being held. No bomb was found.

They were "wrong and have no place in the U.S. political system," Segretti said.

The California lawyer, testifying under a grant of limited immunity after pleading guilty Monday to three counts of minor political sabotage, accused the news media of distorting his activities "out of all proportion."

"I cannot help but feel that I have been abused by rumor, character assassination, innuendo and a complete disregard for the privacy of myself, my friends and my family," Segretti said.

FIRE GUTS FIRMS

They found mainly ashes and charred timber — the remains of their 2½-month-old Beef Barn, one of two unoccupied buildings gutted by a fire which broke out just after 1 a.m.

A passing Esquimalt policeman noticed smoke coming from the restaurant and put in the call for fire trucks, Staff-Sgt. James Owens said today. By the time Esquimalt and Navy firefighting crews arrived, flames had engulfed the Beef Barn and an untenanted building next door at 941 Esquimalt.

Crews stayed on the job all night and by this morning were still wetting down the smouldering remains.

The cause of the fire has not been determined.

Lucas was talking about $1,200 worth of paper take-out bags printed with the restaurant's insignia. "We ordered them months ago and we've been waiting since May for these things to get here," Mrs. Lucas said.

"They were delivered Friday."

Three packages of cigarettes were found lying on the floor of the restaurant. They had been left on a desk the night before — the desk was destroyed but the cigarettes were merely singed.

"I guess I ought to keep this as a souvenir," Lucas said.

Migrants Drawing Dole

TORONTO (CP) — A senior official of the immigration department said Tuesday that more than 3,000 migrant workers from such countries as Portugal and Italy are drawing unemployment insurance benefits from Canada.

He said the seasonal workers have been flying to Canada for years as "visitors" and working in seasonal construction jobs from May until October. In October, they register with Unemployment Insurance Commission offices and have their cheques sent to mail drops in Toronto, Montreal and Vancouver.

"Then they fly back home with their loot and enjoy it all winter—and those unemployment cheques from Canada don't hurt a bit," he said.

He said they get employment here by obtaining social insurance cards which do not require proof of identity.

Some get as many as five social insurance cards under five different names and are paid under different part-time employment identities, he said. Another gimmick used by the workers is to claim the maximum number of dependents for income tax purposes "although many are single men".

B.C. HYDRO GIVEN STRIKE NOTICE

VANCOUVER (CP) — The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers has served strike notice against B.C. Hydro, but union representative Doug Cronk said today there are no immediate plans for the 2,400 employees to walk off their jobs.

There have been four meetings with the company since Gilmour was appointed Aug. 28, and another is expected Thursday, said Cronk.

Imperial Seeks Price Hike

OTTAWA (CP) — Despite a federal price freeze, eastern Canadians could soon face yet another increase in the cost of gasoline and heating oil.

The energy department disclosed Tuesday that Imperial Oil has applied for permission to bypass the freeze and raise its prices to offset a weekend increase in the cost of Venezuelan crude.

Details were not disclosed but a spokesman indicated the result could be a one or two-cent rise in the cost of gasoline if the government approves the application.

Similar applications are expected within the next few days by other eastern refiners, including Shell Canada Ltd. and Gulf Oil Canada Ltd.

Imperial has already made three price increases this year, the last Aug. 1 when gasoline went up two cents a gallon and heating oil rose 1.8 cents. The raises left prices in Montreal at about 56.9 cents for regular gasoline and 27.7 cents for heating oil.

A five-month price freeze for domestic petroleum products was recommended Sept. 4 by Prime Minister Trudeau as an anti-inflation measure.

It was subsequently accepted by all major oil companies but the government left the door open for intervening price adjustments to offset unforseen increases in the cost of imported oil.

The latest offshore cost increase came during the weekend when Venbezuela, following a worldwide trend, boosted its crude oil selling price a total of 46 cents to $41.89 a barrel.

The Canadian oil market east of the Ottawa Valley line is supplied totally by offshore oil under a national policy adopted in 1961. Markets west of the line are supplied by domestic oil, largely from Alberta.

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — President Nixon today said Vice-President Spiro Agnew's declaration that he would not resign even if indicted by a grand jury is proper and should be respected.

The president also told reporters in a half-hour news conference at the White House that he had never asked for Agnew's resignation.

He said that the vice-president had always insisted to him that he was innocent of any wrongdoing, but Nixon did say that the charges against Agnew are "serious," according to briefings given him by justice officials.

A federal grand jury met in Baltimore today for the second session to look into allegations against Agnew in connection with a reported political kickback scheme among Maryland politicians and contractors. Nixon said none of the charges involved activities since Agnew had been vice-president.

Meanwhile the judge handling the grand jury investigation told the jurors in an unusual public session that they should not be influenced by stories from the news media.

U.S. District Court Judge Walter E. Hoffman summoned the jury, after a private meeting with lawyers for Agnew and the justice department, to lecture them on their responsibilities and duties in investigating federal crimes.

Hoffman told the jurors that if they feel they may have been "improperly influenced by the news media" and cannot honestly consider the evidence that may be presented "you should advise me promptly to this effect."

Volunteer checks gas level in air over Camrose

A MILE-LONG DEATH CLOUD

Times News Services

NEW NORWAY, Alta. — A deadly mile-long cloud of hydrogen sulfide of 20 times lethal strength, wafted around this central Alberta farming area today forcing the evacuation of 5,000 people from six towns.

The RCMP said today it was considering the evacuation of a seventh community, Edberg, 12 miles east of the site where a natural gas well ruptured Tuesday, spewing deadly gas into the air.

Traces of the gas, which smells like rotten eggs, were detected in that community.

Many of the people who were evacuated during the night and from areas north and west of the well site were allowed to return home this morning but were warned to be ready to flee again should the deadly cloud return.

The cloud is moving at a rate of about 30 yards a minute in the area 50 miles south-southeast of Edmonton.

Crews wearing gas masks are working to cap the well and Sunoco officials believe the situation will be under control by tonight.

The 15-year-old well was being serviced to increase production when it blew wild.

Gordon Fredericks of Gamache Well Servicing Ltd., the contracting company doing the service work, said today a violent blast blew about 90 feet of pipe more than 20 feet into the air while pipe was being pulled from the bottom of the 5,600-foot well for replacement.

Officials said the well would be easier to control than a well which blows wild during drilling operations.

It contained a full casing and blowout equipment which could be activated after equipment was moved to the wellhead.

But if damage to wellhead valves and equipment was extensive, controlling the well could be a long process, one spokesman said.

The cloud of gas had people worried in Edmonton, 50 miles away.

Some were calling the Emergency Measures Organization headquarters there asking if they should prepare to evacuate.

The EMO said the people were assured there was no danger to the city, especially since the cloud of gas was moving eastwards, away from the provincial capital.

Inflation Outpacing Wages

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian workers are losing the battle of inflation after three months of extraordinary sharp rises in living costs that more than wiped out wage gains, latest government figures show.

Statistics Canada reported Tuesday that the average wage of four million workers — nearly half of Canada's work force, and concentrated in the highest-paying industries — declined two cents a week to $161.36 in July.

The decreased wages can be attributed to various reasons — the number of workers unemployed because of strikes during the month, shorter working hours because of holidays and the traditionally higher number of low-paid employees, such as students, during July.

The drop, coupled with the 3.2-per-cent jump in consumer prices in June, July and August, put the average worker's wages behind rising prices for the first time this year of Canada's worst inflation since 1951.

The July wage figures of $161.36 a week was $11.64 above July of 1972 but the 7.7-per-cent rise in living costs over the same period wiped out $12.42 a week in purchasing power for a net loss of 78 cents a week.

August's steepest monthly rise in living costs in 22 years is likely to make the workers' deficit even greater.

But if it shows wages remained unchanged from July, the average worker would show a net loss of $1.75 a week over the last year.

Conversely, if the August pay figure rises, it would make up some or all of the deficit.

SECOND SECTION

Is there a problem with hot dogs in Saanich?

This was the question asked by Ald. William Noel when the finance committee met Tuesday.

"Why does the SPCA van have an amber light flashing on the top," he queried, "Do we have hot dogs?"

Ald. Leslie Passmore suggested the amber light was needed to protect the pound catcher from being run down by cars, as he left the highway to rush "across the meadow with his net out."

Projects assistant Dick Gibson told the committee that the light acted as a warning when the van was parked on streets and highways.

"Last week," Gibson said, "he had to help a horse that was lying in the middle of West Saanich Road. That's the sort of time when the light comes in handy."

Gibson told the committee that for the third year in succession canvassers had covered the municipality from June 1 to Sept. 4 finding 1,116 dogs that had no licences.

Monday Closings

Liquor stores, libraries, post offices, and most shops will be closed Monday for Thanksgiving Day holiday.

Local, provincial and federal government offices also are closed.

The Provincial Museum will open Saturday, Sunday and Monday from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

WIDEN PARTNERSHIP

Mayors Ask Province To Share Royal Cost

While marshalling council support in picking up the $250,000 price tag for the Royal Theatre two Greater Victoria mayors have asked the provincial government to help meet the bill.

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said Tuesday night:

"In the absence of any apparent definite move by Mayor (Peter) Pollen, other than casual conversations with government members, as mayor of Saanich I have written Minister of Recreation and Conservation Jack Radford to ask if the provincial government can help under the Community Recreation Facilities Fund Act."

He added, "I have every hope that the provincial government will look very sincerely at becoming a partner."

He added, "The government might wish to look at it under some other formula (of funding). There are potential sources that have not been fully explored."

Curtis' comments implying lack of initiative on the city's part in seeking provincial assistance were dismissed by Pollen today as an attempt to "make political hay."

At his press conference this morning Pollen produced a letter from Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall, replying to a letter Pollen had written Aug. 6, in which the mayor suggested a provincial contribution to the Royal Theatre acquisition.

★ ★ ★

Pollen said he had proposed a one-third contribution from the provincial recreation facilities fund, and Hall's reply indicated he would be discussing the matter with Radford.

The mayor said he had also been in touch with the federal ministry of urban affairs to investigate the possibility of assistance from Ottawa.

If the municipalities could be saved a significant portion of the $250,000 price tag, that amount could be spent on refurbishing the theatre and other improvements, he said.

Pollen said if Curtis had bothered to telephone and find out what the city was doing in seeking other means of financing it would have saved him some embarrassment.

Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford reports that the Royal Theatre purchase will be discussed at Tuesday's council meeting.

"I'm sure we will be supporting it," she said.

It will not be unanimous. Ald. John Goult said today he, for one, would not be in favor of the purchase:

"I've been mixed up with the arts all my life," he said, "I don't really think that these people understand what they're getting into when they contemplate buying a theatre."

Goult said it would be preferable to seek provincial assistance in building a permanent arts centre.

Esquimalt voted 6-1 against taking part in the purchase at last month's council meeting but Ald. George McCreadie, who represents Esquimalt on the intermunicipal committee, says he will ask the council to reconsider its decision.

Beef Up Own Force C. Saanich Choice

Central Saanich has no choice now but to go ahead and beef up its own police force, Mayor Archie Galbraith said today.

Statements this week by both Saanich council and the RCMP saying they would not extend police services into Central Saanich "leaves us no alternative," Galbraith said.

A referendum, requested by some residents of the municipality on the question of police services, will not be held.

"That's the end of it now," Galbraith said. "We have tried both Saanich and the RCMP and they have both turned us down. We will go ahead with our own force and try to implement our updating recommendations as soon as possible."

The mayor said he hoped to call a special meeting of council and the police commission soon to recommend that a new chief for the force be picked as soon as possible, "may be this week."

"That new chief has a lot of work to do and he's got to get started."

Galbraith will recommend that all suggestions contined in a report by Delta police chief Mervin Smith be implemented as soon as possible.

"We should be able to have everything going in a matter of six weeks," Galbraith said.

Smith's recommendations included the construction of a holding cell in the Central Saanich police station, the hiring of another officer and the purchase of a breathalyser machine.

"I'm so pleased that the whole thing is finally settled," Galbraith said.

"I wasn't happy with the limited policing we've had without a regular chief. Now that we know where we stand we can get down to business and do something about it."

Gabraith said he hoped to meet with Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer next week "just to get an indication of his thoughts on our municipality and others.

"We don't want to go into too heavy capital expenditures this year and then find out next year that he has other ideas."

Assistant RCMP Commissioner Gordon Cunningham said the RCMP turned down Central Saanich's request for policing because, "we just don't have the manpower to take on any additional responsibilities in British Columbia."

"It's our policy not to add municipalities to the list we serve already," Cunningham said.

10,000 Wait To Be Bombed

By BRUCE OBEE
Times Staff

When the lights went out in Santiago's Estadio Nacional 10,000 prisoners waited in deathly silence to be bombed.

Bill Paterson, 20, of 2277 Gail Place, arrived at his Sidney home Tuesday night after 10 days of political imprisonment in the Santiago soccer stadium.

In a Times interview today Paterson told of the fear, the anger, the death and violence which has turned the country of Chile into a living nightmare.

"I was never handcuffed," said Paterson, "but every time we were moved somewhere it was the old hands behind the head and every time we stopped it was spread eagle against the wall."

Paterson and 177 other prisoners were held in a tiny change room inside the stadium.

Asked about the sanitary conditions Paterson replied, "What sanitary conditions?"

"We had to eat out of bowls that were just sort of rinsed out with cold water," he said.

Each morning the prisoners were served a cup of tea or coffee and bread. Lunch was half a bowl of broth and "if we were lucky we got another piece of bread."

That was the daily diet.

★ ★ ★

At the end of a hallway leading into the room was a "giant machine gun" waiting to greet anyone attempting to escape.

But the night the lights wen out the stadium's 10,000 prisoners sat in dead silence expecting to be bombed. Fortunately they weren't.

Shortly after he was taken prisoner Paterson was interrogated about his political beliefs. Questions were asked in English but he was forced to answer in Spanish.

Paterson and his friend had been in Chile four weeks when they were seized at gunpoint Sept. 14 while asleep in their Los Andes hotel room.

"I was beaten when I was in Los Andes with a big rubber truncheon," he said.

Paterson complained of being continually beaten each time they were moved.

"One guy's beating you to go faster and the other guy's holding you by the neck and he won't let you run."

Finally, after 10 days of "hell," he was released.

Paterson says he'll go back to South America but "only as far south as Peru."

"I'm not allowed to go back (to Chile). I was kicked out of the country. I've never been so glad to be kicked out of a country."

Free Sports Complex Because They Said No

Sidney residents may receive a free sports centre . . . because they refused to pay for one.

The residents turned down referendums in 1970 and 1972 to build a recreation complex opposite the Senior Citizen's Activity Centre on Resthaven Drive. But the local Kinsmen now have offered to construct a $68,000 milti-purpose open-air sports centre on the land.

The Kinsmen want to build a rink which could be used for lacrosse, roller hockey as well as ice hockey on the 1.64-acre site.

Although the centre would be built on city land and would be owned by the city when finished, Sidney taxpayers will not have to pay.

Project chairman Donald Day said Tuesday the Kinsmen will apply this week for a $43,000 local Initiatives Grant from the federal government to hire 12 unemployed men to build the complex.

Day said the Kinsmen would raise $25,000 on their own to puy materials needed for the centre, and to hire a foreman and co-ordinator.

He also said the Kinsmen would ask local businesses to donate labor and materials to keep down expenses.

Sidney council approved the proposed project Sept. 24, and if the grant is awarded construction could begin Dec. 1.

The project must be completed May 1 to comply with conditions of the grant.

'Extremely Poor Taste' Says Mayor

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

A handbill advertising an art exhibition at the Open Space centre on Fort Street was condemned as an example of "extremely poor taste" by Mayor Peter Pollen today.

Pollen said the illustration on the poster verges on the pornographic, and he is considering recommending to city council that it take a "dim view" of any future applications from Open Space for municipal financing.

A copy of the poster was displayed outside Open Space this morning, and Pollen said copies have also been on public view in other downtown buildings and sent through the mail.

He told reporters at his weekly press conference that Gene Miller, director of Open Space, claims the picture represents "the sun coming up over the Malahat."

The mayor said to the best of his knowledge the exhibition itself does not exploit sex, but a Times reporter who visited the exhibition this morning came away with a rather different impression.

Pollen said he is not a prude, but added: "I do think there is a marked deterioration in the moral values of our society and acceptance of the most distasteful things . . ."

After the Greater Victoria Intermunicipal committee recently endorsed a $4,100 grant application from Open Space, Victoria handed over its share — $1,656.

Oak Bay and Esquimalt have also agreed to share in the grant but Saanich has tabled the matter until it receives a detailed financial statement from the centre.

Go-Ahead On Malls

Victoria's long-discussed proposal for malls on Broad and View were given the go-ahead by city council in its caucus session Tuesday, with Mayor Peter Pollen expressing the hope the project would be completed by next summer.

The mall on Broad will extend from View to Yates, and on View from Douglas to Government.

Aldermen agreed that before the scheme gets into advanced planning stage, merchants in the area will be invited to participate fully in discussions.

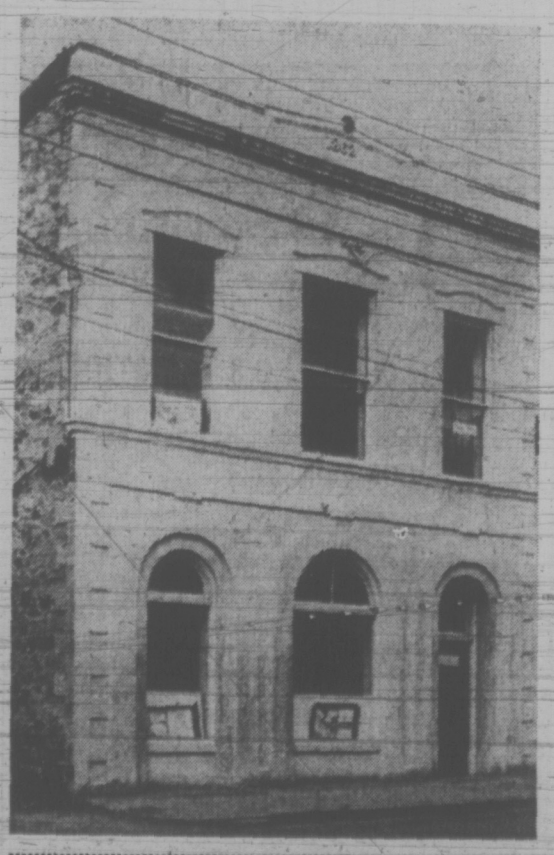
Deep-Frozen It Stood



A 111-year-old warehouse on Store Street just may have remained standing all these years because it was in a deep-frozen state.

But, if the building proves to be basically sound, city council may decide to save it from the bulldozers by designating it a heritage structure worthy of preservation.

Farmer Construction Ltd., which is a partner with Central Contract Parking Company in purchasing the Burns Food Ltd. property at 1618 Store, says in a letter to the city it had hoped to repair the building and lease it out for warehousing and office use.

But, the letter adds, Burns Foods recently turned off all the refrigeration "and in the thawing process we were astonished to discover that in an unfrozen state the building is not structurally sound."

Farmer Construction is now asking for a demolition permit, but before considering the matter council has asked city engineer James Garnett to report on the building's structural condition.

WOMAN, 46, DIES IN CAR-TREE CRASH

A 46-year-old Victoria woman died early this morning in a single car accident on Trans Canada Highway near Thetis Lake Park.

Colwood RCMP say Peggy Patricia Webb of 3081 Glen Lake Road was killed instantly when the car she was driving left the road and struck a tree, at about 2:30 a.m.

She was alone at the time.

$40,000 Pledge to Handicapped

Saanich's finance committee will recommend to council the municipality pay its share — $40,000 — of the $100,000 intermunicipal grant toward an activity centre for the handicapped on Vernon.

When approved, the $40,000 will be paid over a two-year period.

The centre is to be part of the Battin-Fielding complex for the handicapped and will be located beside 19 townhouses and a 60-unit apartment for handicapped persons.

The centre will provide therapy, work and recreation for about 200 people.

"This (the centre), is not a fly-by-night thing," Garth Homer, executive director of the Community Chest of Greater Victoria, told the committee Tuesday, "It was in the works when I came here 7½ years ago."

Mayor Hugh Curtis said Saanich "pioneered" the Battin-Fielding project, so had a particular interest in contributing to the intermunicipal grant.

Homer said the activity centre committee was still hopeful the federal government would match the provincial grant of $300,000.

He said two members of the federal health and welfare department had visited Victoria and "looked at the scheme."

"If we don't go ahead before the end of the year we'll lose some $200,000 (in promised donations)."

The intermunicipal committee has recommended $100,000 be paid over five-year periods by participating municipalities.

Oak Bay has already voted to pay its share on this basis.

Esquimalt Mayor Art Young said today the grant will probably be considered at tonight's council meeting and "probably be referred to council's finance committee.

"But I would hope, personally, that consideration will be favorable."

In Victoria, the activity centre grant application has been referred by council to manager J. H. Bramley for review and report.

In other business Tuesday, the finance committee agreed Saanich should pay its share of $2,250 for the operation of the 1973 Christmas Bureau.

Major Jack Barr said the Salvation Army would again organize the bureau and the $2,250 would mainly be used for wages.

NIXON REFUND MORE THAN TAX

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — The Providence Journal-Bulletin said today that President Nixon paid $1,670 in federal taxes for 1970 and 1971 and received $131,503 in federal income tax refunds for the two-year period.

The Journal-Bulletin said government sources provided documents showing that President and Mrs. Nixon paid $792.81 in federal taxes in 1971, while receiving a $72,614.43 refund. It said the documents show that in 1971 the Nixons paid $878.03 in taxes and got a $58,998.41 refund.

The Baltimore Sun reported on Sept. 11 that Nixon apparently paid no income tax for the two years because of his deductions for interest, real estate taxes and the donation of his vice-presidential papers to the National Archives. These deductions, the Sun said, exceeded the President's salary of $200,000 a year.

Nixon issued personal finance statements in 1968, 1969 and 1972. He said at a news conference last month that his 1970 and 1971 tax returns were audited by the Internal Revenue Service and no change was ordered.

The Journal-Bulletin said today, "Taxes paid by the Nixons in 1970-71 are roughly equivalent to taxes paid by someone who earns about $7,000 a year, claims one exemption and does not itemize deductions, according to tax manuals."

Unions Plan War Rally

Union leaders in British Columbia will meet in Victoria next Tuesday to map strategy in their battles against the government's proposed labor code.

The B.C. Federation of Labor, which with 200,000 members is the principal labor body in the province, has bitterly denounced the code, introduced into the legislature Monday.

B.C. Fed officers and representatives of affiliated unions will meet in the Empress at 10 a.m. Tuesday and it is expected that lobbying of MLAs will begin as soon as the meeting ends.

But in contrast to the B.C. Fed position, the leader of British Columbia's biggest trade union has adopted a wait-and-see position for the time being.

Jack Munro, regional president of the International Woodworkers of America, said in a telephone interview from Bermuda that his union won't attack the labor code at least until it has been thoroughly studied.

He said he wants time to study the code. He welcomed the appointment of former IWA regional president Jack Moore as a vice-chairman of the new Labor Relations Board saying "he has plenty of experience to do a good job."

He added that labor has for years sought a permanent Labor Relations Board, one of the features of the new legislation.

Munro's comments were seen as indicating a split between the federation and its biggest affiliated union, but B.C. Fed secretary Ray Haynes denied any suggestion of division.

Haynes said he is "sure" Munro has been "misinterpreted. He is in Bermuda where I am sure there aren't copies of the bill." Haynes said one newspaper which published Munro's comments today is "making a mountain out of a molehill."

He said the federation "can't wait for him to get back from Bermuda" and was moving immediately to lobby for changes in the labor code which had "shocked" federation leaders.

He said none of the persons the federation recommended for consideration among the appointments announced Tuesday to the Labor Relations Board was considered.

The cabinet appointed Paul Weiler, law professor and arbitrator from Toronto, as chairman and Moore, Vancouver Provincial Court Judge Nancy Morrison and Ed Peck, president of Towboat Industrial Relations Association in Vancouver, as vice-chairmen.

B.C. Gas Crunch Imminent

A shortage of natural gas in B.C. with the potential of causing losses of more than $20 million in production and more than 250,000 man-days could begin as soon as two weeks from now, Attorney-General Alex Macdonald told the legislature Tuesday.

Macdonald said he has obtained figures from major industrial operators in the province who will be seriously affected by the threatened shortage of natural gas caused by water in wells encountered by Amoco Canada Ltd., one of the major suppliers to Westcoast Transmission.

Westcoast has announced it will cut back supplies on a pro rata basis to all its customers, including the three major distributors who transport natural gas for use in B.C. homes and industries.

Macdonald said the "crunch" caused by the natural gas shortage could come as soon as Oct. 15, and be "getting severe" by Nov. 1.

Macdonald tabled in the house copies of his figures after saying he had expressed the government's concern over the situation to federal Energy Minister Donald Macdonald, who met the attorney-general earlier in the day.

Hardest-hit, according to Alex Macdonald's figures, will be Cominco's operations at Trail, with a potential production loss of $7.5 million and a loss of 150,000 man-days in employee time.

The second largest potential loss was put at $3.2 million in production losses and a loss of 45,000 man-days, by Consumers Glass of Burnaby.

A complete plant shutdown could result in the phasing-out of the operation, creating a financial loss to the community of more than $5 million.

Alex Macdonald said he had impressed on the federal minister the concern felt by the provincial government about the situation and had asked "in no uncertain terms" Otta-

Segretti Says Sorry

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Donald Segretti, his testimony interrupted by a bomb threat, told the Senate Watergate Committee today that ex-presidential aide Dwight Chapin hired him to conduct political sabotage on Democratic hopefuls last year.

Segretti testified that he received $45,000 in salary and expenses for his efforts, which he said he mounted in "about half a dozen" states.

He said Chapin, an old friend from college days, hired him late in 1971 to play "pranks" on Democratic hopefuls. Chapin often told him exactly what to do, he added.

Chairman Sam Ervin (Dem.-N.C.) abruptly adjourned the hearing shortly after 11 a.m. EDT until early afternoon "very much against my will" after being informed by police that there had been a telephoned bomb threat at the Senate caucus room where the hearings are being held. No bomb was found.

They were "wrong and have no place in the U.S. political system," Segretti said.

The California lawyer, testifying under a grant of limited immunity after pleading guilty Monday to three counts of minor political sabotage, accused the news media of distorting his activities "out of all proportion."

"I cannot help but feel that I have been abused by rumor, character assassination, innuendo and a complete disregard for the privacy of myself, my friends and my family," Segretti said.

FIRE GUTS FIRM

They found mainly ashes and charred timber — the remains of their 2½-month-old Beef Barn, one of two unoccupied buildings gutted by a fire which broke out just after 1 a.m.

A passing Esquimalt policeman noticed smoke coming from the restaurant and put in the call for fire trucks, Staff-Sgt. James Owens said today. By the time Esquimalt and Navy firefighting crews arrived, flames had engulfed the Beef Barn and an untenanted building next door at 941 Esquimalt.

Crews stayed on the job all night and by this morning were still wetting down the smouldering remains.

The cause of the fire has not been determined.

Lucas was talking about $1,200 worth of paper take-out bags printed with the restaurant's insignia. "We ordered them months ago and we've been waiting since May for these things to get here," Mrs. Lucas said.

"They were delivered Friday."

Three packages of cigarettes were found lying on the floor of the restaurant. They had been left on a desk the night before — the desk was destroyed but the cigarettes were merely singed.

"I guess I ought to keep this as a souvenir," Lucas said.

Migrants Drawing Dole

TORONTO (CP) — A senior official of the immigration department said Tuesday that more than 3,000 migrant workers from such countries as Portugal and Italy are drawing unemployment insurance benefits from Canada.

He said the seasonal workers have been flying to Canada for years as "visitors" and working in seasonal construction jobs from May until October. In October, they register with Unemployment Insurance Commission offices and have their cheques sent to mail drops in Toronto, Montreal and Vancouver.

"Then they fly back home with their loot and enjoy it all winter — and those unemployment cheques from Canada don't hurt a bit," he said.

He said they get employment here by obtaining social insurance cards which do not require proof of identity.

Some get as many as five social insurance cards under five different names and are paid under different part-time employment identities, he said. Another gimmick used by the workers is to claim the maximum number of dependents for income tax purposes "although many are single men".

B.C. HYDRO GIVEN STRIKE NOTICE

VANCOUVER (CP) — The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers has served strike notice against B.C. Hydro, but union representative Doug Cronk said today there are no immediate plans for the 2,400 employees to walk off their jobs.

There have been four meetings with the company since Gilmour was appointed Aug. 28, and another is expected Thursday, said Cronk.

Imperial Seeks Price Hike

OTTAWA (CP) — Despite a federal price freeze, eastern Canadians could soon face yet another increase in the cost of gasoline and heating oil.

The energy department disclosed Tuesday that Imperial Oil has applied for permission to bypass the freeze and raise its prices to offset a weekend increase in the cost of Venezuelan crude.

Details were not disclosed but a spokesman indicated the result could be a one or two-cent rise in the cost of gasoline if the government approves the application.

Similar applications are expected within the next few days by other eastern refiners, including Shell Canada Ltd. and Gulf Oil Canada Ltd.

Imperial has already made three price increases this year, the last Aug. 1 when gasoline went up two cents a gallon and heating oil rose 1.8 cents. The raises left prices in Montreal at about 56.9 cents for regular gasoline and 27.7 cents for heating oil.

A five-month price freeze for domestic petroleum products was recommended Sept. 4 by Prime Minister Trudeau as an anti-inflation measure.

It was subsequently accepted by all major oil companies but the government left the door open for intervening price adjustments to offset unforseen increases in the cost of imported oil.

The Canadian oil market east of the Ottawa Valley line is supplied totally by offshore oil under a national policy adopted in 1961. Markets west of the line are supplied by domestic oil, largely from Alberta.

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — President Nixon today said Vice-President Spiro Agnew's declaration that he would not resign even if indicted by a grand jury is proper and should be respected.

The president also told reporters in a half-hour news conference at the White House that he had never asked for Agnew's resignation.

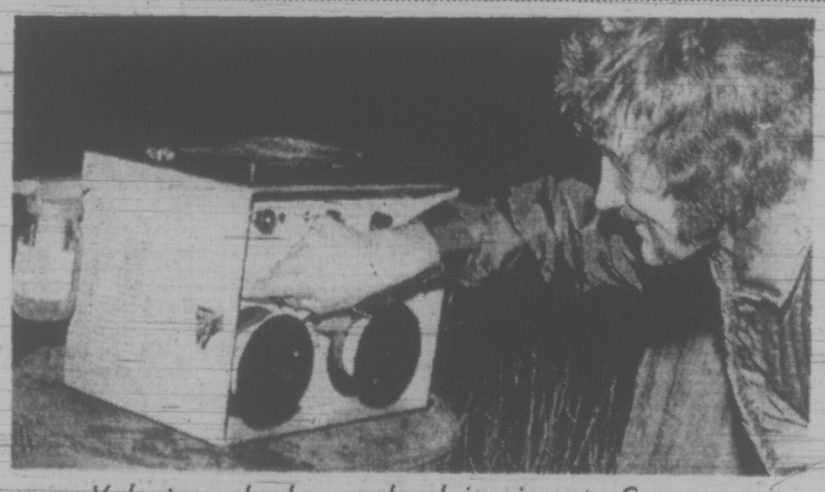
He said that the vice-president had always insisted to him that he was innocent of any wrongdoing, but Nixon did say that the charges against Agnew are "serious," according to briefings given him by justice officials.

A federal grand jury met in Baltimore today for the second session to look into allegations against Agnew in connection with a reported political kickback scheme among Maryland politicians and contractors. Nixon said none of the charges involved activities since Agnew had been vice-president.

Meanwhile the judge handling the grand jury investigation told the jurors in an unusual public session that they should not be influenced by stories from the news media.

U.S. District Court Judge Walter E. Hoffman summoned the jury, after a private meeting with lawyers for Agnew and the justice department, to lecture them on their responsibilities and duties in investigating federal crimes.

Hoffman told the jurors that if they feel they may have been "improperly influenced by the news media" and cannot honestly consider the evidence that may be presented "you should advise me promptly to this effect."



Volunteer checks gas level in air over Camrose

A MILE-LONG DEATH CLOUD

Times News Services

NEW NORWAY, Alta. — A deadly mile-long cloud of hydrogen sulfide of 20 times lethal strength, wafted around this central Alberta farming area today forcing the evacuation of 5,000 people from six towns.

The RCMP said today it was considering the evacuation of a seventh community, Edberg, 12 miles east of the site where a natural gas well ruptured Tuesday, spewing deadly gas into the air.

Traces of the gas, which smells like rotten eggs, were detected in that community.

Many of the people who were evacuated during the night and from areas north and west of the well site were allowed to return home this morning but were warned to be ready to flee again should the deadly cloud return.

The cloud is moving at a rate of about 30 yards a minute in the area 50 miles southsoutheast of Edmonton.

Crews wearing gas masks are working to cap the well and Sunoco officials believe the situation will be under control by tonight.

The 15-year-old well was being serviced to increase production when it blew wild.

Gordon Fredericks of Gamache Well Servicing Ltd., the contracting company doing the service work, said today a violent blast blew about 90 feet of pipe more than 20 feet into the air while pipe was being pulled from the bottom of the 5,600-foot well for replacement.

Officials said the well would be easier to control than a well which blows wild during drilling operations.

It contained a full casing and blowout equipment which could be activated after equipment was moved to the wellhead.

But if damage to wellhead valves and equipment was extensive, controlling the well could be a long process, one spokesman said.

The cloud of gas had people worried in Edmonton, 50 miles away.

Some were calling the Emergency Measures Organization headquarters there asking if they should prepare to evacuate.

The EMO said the people were assured there was no danger to the city, especially since the cloud of gas was moving eastwards, away from the provincial capital.

Inflation Outpacing Wages

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian workers are losing the battle of inflation after three months of extraordinary sharp rises in living costs that more than wiped out wage gains, latest government figures show.

Statistics Canada reported Tuesday that the average wage of four million workers — nearly half of Canada's work force, and concentrated in the highest-paying industries — declined two cents a week to $161.36 in July.

The decreased wages can be attributed to various reasons — the number of workers unemployed because of strikes during the month, shorter working hours because of holidays and the traditionally higher number of low-paid employees, such as students, during July.

The drop, coupled with the 3.2-per-cent jump in consumer prices in June, July and August, put the average worker's wages behind rising prices for the first time this year of Canada's worst inflation since 1951.

The July wage figure of $161.36 a week was $11.64 above July of 1972 but the 7.7-per-cent rise in living costs over the same period wiped out $12.42 a week in purchasing power for a net loss of 78 cents a week.

August's steepest monthly rise in living costs in 22 years is likely to make the workers' deficit even greater.

But if it shows wages remained unchanged from July, the average worker would show a net loss of $1.75 a week over the last year.
